The Water Committee Hastings, Adamson, Barton, Jones, Mc-Connell, Sheppard and Walker attended committee in the executive room at the city hall yesterday afternoon. The first business considered was the report of the subcommittee, recommending the expenditure of $300 to secure an expert, from the establishment of Messrs. Worthington, to test the pumping engines under J. H. Venables' control. The chairman called on Venables control. The charman caned on Venables te account for the unsatisfac-tory record of the engines, when Ald. Hastings interrupted, and the committee agreed to empower the council to deal with the question of employing an expert.

The committee decided, on resolution of
Ald. Walker, to cease supplying Rosedale bouseholders who have put in services without leave from the committee. The proceedings of the last meeting of the committee which was pronounced illegal were confirmed. St. Matthew's ward ratepayers are now furnished with mains to which they can attach city water services. A

The Civil Assizes.

The case of the Northwestern Transportation company against Conmee was finished in the assize court yesterday. The case was given to the jury at 2.30, but when the court rose at 5.45 they had not returned with a verdict. Judge O'Connor instructed them to return with a sealed verdict this morning. Morrice against the Weston Woollen Manufacturing company was an action to recover the value of $2300 worth of goods advanced by Morrice & Co. to Geo. Edwards & Co. warehoused the goods with the Weston woollen. The plaintiffs claim that the goods were only loaned to Edwards & Co. for accommodatien. ### THE CAT SHOW.

Mr. Lyle's Attractive Feline Exhibit Horticultural Hall.
From the New York News.

Encouraged by his success of last year and the great interest taken in the exhibition, especially by ladies and children, Fred Kyle has decided to open another cat show and the exhibition was inaugurated to-day under the most favorable auspices. When the writer visited Horticultural Hall, where the "pussies" receive their friends, he found such an array of cats as he had not heretofore dreamed of. Already more than 600 have been recelved and additional entries were coming in every hour. The space for the exhibits is tastefully arranged with cages, in two tiers, one above the other, about the hall, and in the centre. As far as each exhibit is concerned, all are treated alike, the tiles in a day, some of large size; two-legged cats, three-legged cats; cats with five, six and seven toes; white cats with blue eyes; Maltese cats; black cats; tortoise shell cats; and cats which are vouched for by their owners as having had the most wonderful experience in domestic life. Besides all the cats Mr. Kyle has retained in the exhibition many cages of the most beautiful An application for a new trial in the case of Keats v. RAID ON AN OPIUM JOINT.

Davin's Beautiful Young Wom Discovered "Hitting a Pipe."
From the Victoria, B.G., Post, Oct. 18.

This morning between 12 and 1 o'clock, Sergt. Flewin, accompanied by Officer Hough, entered an opium den on Fisgard street kept by a villainous-looking Chinaman known as "William." The officer on man known as "William." The officer on entering discovered several white men, a young white girl named Clara Kinsellis and a young Indian woman named Mary. The entire party were smoking the deadly drug, and as it is contrary to law to supply Indians with optiming the proprietor of the den was arrested. The Indian woman admitted having smoked two or three pipes, which were supplied by the owner of the joint. He was brought before Hon. A. F. Pemberton this morning and the charge having been proved he was and the charge having been proved he was and the charge having been proved he was fined $50.

Clara Kinsellis, who is—or rather was good looking before she became a slave to the drug—is a young white girl about 24 years of age. She is evidentally a confirmed opium smoker, and in court this morning, she was so nervous and trembled so much that she was unable to sign her

When the officers entered the den the when the officers entered the den the entire party were tying in bunks, each with an opium pipe in their mouths. Clara looked up lazily to see who the in truders were, and then resumed her occupation, too much occupied with her pipe to pay them any further attention. After finishing her smoke she laid her head back and closing her eyes (those beautiful orbs so glowingly described by Nick Davin and which evidently made an impression upon his heart) remained oblivious to what was taking place. We understand from the officers this young girl is a Spaniard, and has become a confirmed opium smoker, frequenting the dens eyery night. She has long since became lost to all sense of shame or propriety, and in order to gratify her intense craving for the drug mixes freely with the most depraved characters.

Which Kill but Leave No Trac

Behind.
From the Philadelphia Record. The accident to young Dr. A. H. Phillips of this city, at a Montreal hotel from an overdose of digitalis a few days ago, has provoked considerable inquiry as to the nature of that most interesting of all poisons. The popular idea is that there is no poison so subtle that its presence in the poison so subtle that its presence in the body of its victim cannot be detected after death is entirely erroneous, and the active principle of digitalis (digitaline) is one of the most striking instances of a deadly poison which leaves no tell-tale evidence of its work behind it. One-half grain of this terrible drug would be sufficient to instantly kill a strong man, and no scientific research however, prompt, would be able stantly kill a strong man, and no scientific research, however prompt, would be able to find a trace of it afterward.

In 1864 Dr. De la Pommerais of Paris was tried for murdering his mistross. He had given her a dose of digitaline, but a post-mortem examination failed to discover traces of the subtle drug, although the most celebrated surgeons made examinations. The most that could be don was to take portions of the contents of the stomach and feed it to animals, which at once exhibited all the symptoms of digita-line poisoning. This was, of course, but presumptive evidence, as it was supposed in advance that the woman had been mur-dered by the drug. Without such a basis the doctors could have discovered nething to suggest the presence of digitaline. The drug kills by "teutonizing" the heart muscles, and is almost instantaneous in its action.

There are several other vegetable poisons equally impossible to detect, mucaria, duboisra and ocenties, for instance.

Mr. Knott's letter in The Toronto World of a recent date, above the signature E E. Knott, and which appeared in our last week's issue, expresses the sentiment of a week's issue, expresses the sentiment of a large number of our more thoughtful young politicians in regard to the Mowat demons stration. Mr. Knott is well known to many of our readers, having spent the greater part of his early life in the township of Euphrasia. He has held the highest position in the gift of the people of that fertile township, and has spent a number of years in Toronto, where he has, no doubt, acquired a great deal of useful information. He has paid considerable attention to the politics of the province, and is a shrewd, thoughtful, pushing business man. His letter shows evidences of mature reasoning, and reflects the honest opinion of hundreds of unprejudiced politicians.

Detroit Free Press: A young woman Sarah Carter of Clinton, Ont., left her place of employment a day or two ago, and on Saturday learned that she could get a place in the Potomac quarter. She did not know the character of the locality, did not know the character of the locality, and while talking to the proprietress of a place of questionable repute she was noticed by Anna Bush, an old resident of the district, who asked the girl to accompany her, at the same time warning her of the reputation of the house where she was offered work. The woman took the girl to the central station and informed Sergt. Martin of the case. The officer subsequently had the young woman removed to quently had the young woman removed to the working woman's home.

He local, had his arm seriously pinched. He was removing the pin from between two New York and Lake Erie coal cars in order to cut the crossing, and being unfamiliar with the cars, left his hand resting upon the pin. When the driver slackened back, the lower part of Minor's elbow was caught between the deadwoods and very badly crushed. Drs. Macdonald and Cascaden attended the injured fireman. An examination showed no bones were broken, and he was brought home to St. Thomas on a mail. That Minor's arm was not taken off is almost a miracle.
