

over disease by making a perfect cure of a woman who had been diseased twelve years. He proves his power over death by raising Jairus' little daughter to life.

SEPTEMBER.—The great forerunner of Jesus, John the Baptist, is beheaded for witnessing for the truth, and his disciples come and tell Jesus. Jesus feeds the five thousand hungry people with five small loaves and a few fishes. The Syrophenician pleads earnestly, humbly, and perseveringly, for her little daughter; and Jesus rewards her faith, healing her little daughter.

Singing by the whole school.

OCTOBER.—Jesus worked a signal miracle of healing the deaf and dumb man, that made all the people exclaim, He doeth all things well. He cast a devil out of a little boy in answer to a father's pleadings and faith. He proves his own character to be lowly, loving, loyal, and liberal; and he heals the poor blind man, whose earnest cries offend everyone but Jesus.

NOVEMBER.—Jesus gives a lesson to unprofitable Christians in withering the fig tree. He shows that love to God and man is the keeping of the whole law. He shows that the Lord requires purity in the life before God as well as man. Jesus is anointed with very precious ointment, worth about $37½; the Pharisees censure the waste. Jesus praises her motive, and leaves it in his Gospel as a memorial. Jesus is betrayed, according to prophecy, by one of his disciples, and arrested.

DECEMBER.—Jesus is taken before the high priest, while Peter denies with oaths that he knows him; but afterwards repents, and weeps for his sin, and Jesus forgives him. Jesus was crucified between the two thieves. He, who knew no sin, was numbered with transgressors. On the third day he rises again, and appears to Mary Magdalene, then to two of his disciples, then to eleven of them, and afterwards to five
