Speaking of the great merit of the man who, once the victim of drink. tramples upon his passion and soars into the atmosphere of emancipation from liquor, he says :--"I once heard a man say that when that terrible craving for drink comes upon me, if you were to offer me with one hand heaven with a cup of water and with the other hell and a glass of brandy, I would be impelled that appetite, without a moment's hesitation, to take hell and the bran-

"How few there are who, having arrived at this stage, fling off the galling chains of servitude and trample under foot the badges of their slavery. But when the poor victim makes one determined struggle he dces, with the assistance of a merciful God, strike off the links that bound him captive, and stands once more in full consciousness of his soul's freedom, and oh! how immeasurably greater is his glory than that of the conqueror whose fame is dyed in the blood of thousands. He has crushed beneath his heel the serpent's head-his victory is bloodless-it is pure.'

From the statistican's standpoint Or Weish tells us that :-

"A prominent statistican asserts the startling fact that in the United States there are over 700,000 drunkards: over 100,000 die annually who go to drunkard's graves: over 275 die daily, or 12 per hour, from the effects of strong drink. And this in a country that boasts of its Christian civilization, of its schools and colleges, its churches and benevolent institutions. In the face of this have we not grave reasons to stand buy for little expenditure, appalled at the strange apathy of a people?"

-But the most important point of the address was that in which the doctor spoke from experience with the world. He said :-

"Again, we are told alcohol is not a poison: we are even urged to a chemical analysis to fortify this assertion. Suppose we do analyze alcohal by the reagents that science has developed; it is true that we find nothing but the component parts C II. and O., and these in themselves are not poisonous; but set aside the fallible evidence of the alembic and report, and deduce the more stable evidence from the recollections of the Tiling and Cement Work, past and all human experience. look for a moment at its sparkling Roofing Materials, centents, and soon I see its color change and on the bottom the red Building Papers, drops of murder are gathering there. I look again from its liquid depths the gastly face of suicide looks stove Linings. th at me with the glazed eyes and vivid features of the dead. Uncer more I look, and there is pale, hage gard want, famine and wretchedness fleating like ethereal waves. I see and the tears of the drunkard's children: I see the ruined hopes of a wicked life and the record of sin and erime. Yes, although the tests of A Blessing to the Fair Sex! science fail to detect them, these terrible ingredients are all there-there to ruin man and all he holds dear.
