

now and I was quite at a standstill when I had a note from Principal Barker, in whose office I had left your letter. I saw him yesterday, and no one could have been more kind and helpful. He cleared up my difficulties in no time, and has put me in touch with just the right man for my work. It has changed my whole sky, and I hope you will not think it too impulsive of me to say so, and to add that it is good, among so
