

attempt to examine a question which has been so thoroughly examined by the great thinkers of every age. The only excuse I can offer is, that I think it the duty of every man who has an idea on any subject, to make it known, as only in this way can perfection be attained.

103. There may be some slight errors in this article ; but there is one thing we may rest assured of—that the laws of God are based and founded on these principles, and all I ask is, for everyone that reads these pages, to think, observe and reflect ; if they do, I have no doubt that they will arrive at the same conclusion as myself.
