

variety of examples derived from practical life; and the whole treatment of the subject evinces the parental wisdom of the author, his deep insight into the juvenile nature, and his large experience in the work of education.—N. Y. Tribune.

—OUR GIRLS.—By Dio Lewis, M. D.—Dr. Lewis talks very plainly and sensibly, and makes very many important suggestions. He does not mince matters at all, but puts every thing in a straightforward and not seldom homely way, conspicuous to the dullest understanding. His style is lively and readable, and the book is very entertaining as well as instructive.—Register, Salem, Mass. It contains suggestions and teaching of precisely the kind that "our girls" everywhere need.—N. Y. Independent. Full of practical and very sensible advice to young women.—Episcopalian.

—WOMAN'S WORTH AND WORTHLESSNESS.—By Gail Hamilton.—To her mind, the author assumes that in a well-regulated social system woman would not be required to work; and from this starting-point she proceeds to show what are her duties in society as it exists, what she can and what she can't do, as well as what she ought or ought not to do. The book will be widely read, not only by women but by men, for it is full of common-sense and brilliant writing, and is interesting from beginning to end.—N. Y. Evening Post.

—THE BAZAR BOOK OF DECORUM.—A series of sensible, well-written, and pleasant essays on the care of the person, manners, etiquette, and ceremonials. The title Bazar Book is taken from the fact that some of the essays which make up this volume appeared originally in the columns of Harper's Bazar. This in itself is a sufficient recommendation—Harper's Bazar being probably the only journal of fashion in the world which has good sense and enlightened reason for its guides. The "Bazar Book of Decorum" deserves every recommendation.—Independent.

—LIFE AND LETTERS OF CATHARINE M. SEDGWICK.—Edited by Mary E. Dewey.—A very neat volume, wherein, thanks to the sympathetic tact of Mary Dewey, we have exhibited the beautiful qualities of mind and heart, the pure, useful, noble character, in a word, the "daily beauty" of Catharine Sedgwick's Life. Her letters, herein gathered, are the genuine and gracious embodiment of her nature. They are charming and cheering—a noble picture of disinterested womanhood. "The Life and Letters of Catharine M. Sedgwick" will add another delightful volume to the standard library of American biography.—Boston Transcript.

—LIFE AND TIMES OF THE REV. JOHN WESLEY, M. A.—By the Rev. Luke Tyerman.—Mr. Tyerman's work was fairly called for, both by the fact that no life of Wesley had been published for forty years, and because Southey's, the only one tolerably written as a literary performance, is the production of a writer who was not himself a member of the Society, who in few points of character resembled the subject of his memoir, and possessed no sources of information which were not already before the world. Mr. Tyerman is a Wesleyan minister, and his materials, both printed and in manuscript, have been accumulating for seventeen years. He has made most diligent use of them; and his history, in regard to its facts, is incomparably more full than any that preceded it.—Saturday Review, London.

—HEAT—SCIENCE FOR THE YOUNG.—By Jacob Abbott.—This book treats of the principles of combustion, and the chemical questions connected with that subject, of the correlation of forces, and the mechanical theory of heat. The information is brought down to the latest results of physical research. The most recent discoveries are described in language of great lucidity, and illustrated with impressive and forcible examples. The work is clothed in a slight dramatic form, which is adapted to win the attention of young readers, without impairing the precision of the statement.

—LIGHT.—By Jacob Abbott.—Treats of the theory of "Light," presenting a popular form the latest conclusions of chemical and optical science on the subject, and elucidating its various points of interest with characteristic clearness and force. Its simplicity of language, and the beauty and appropriateness of its pictorial illustrations, make it a most attractive volume for young persons, while the fulness and accuracy of the information with which it overflows commends it to the attention of mature readers.—N. Y. Tribune.

—LIFE OF THE STEPHENSONS.—By Samuel Smiles.—Mr. Smiles' book is one of the most attractive of biographies, both as regards the personal character of a poor man of genius, fighting out the battle of life with an exemplary valour, and, in a more general way, the history and progress of the railway system in the place where it originated. It contains every thing necessary to be known on that theme, and is as well written as it is comprehensive. It will be the popular life of the Stephenson, as Southey's book is the popular life of Nelson.—New York Times.

—FIVE ACRES TOO MUCH.—By Robert B. Roosevelt.—One of the pleasantest bits of satire we have read for some time. The author has written the book for the purpose of having a good-humoured fling at the writers of works which profess to show how, out of half a dozen acres of land anywhere, the veriest novice can make splendid profit and good time as a practical farmer. So Mr. Roosevelt tells us how, fired with the noble inspiration these books suggest, he got his five acres, built his house, bought his horse, cows, pigs and poultry, and went to work to convert himself into a successful agriculturist. His experiences are very droll, and the financial results he arrives at highly ingenious and satisfactory. There is not too much extravagance in the book—just enough to make one laugh, not enough to convert the mirth into broad farce and grotesquerie.—Independent.

—FAMOUS LONDON MERCHANTS.—By H. R. Fox Bourne.—Tells pleasantly, and with much casual information about commerce and foreign countries, the story of the lives of thirteen London merchants, from famous Dick Whittington to our honoured countryman, George Peabody. Most of them were self-made men, and surely no better incentives to a proper ambition can be placed before boys than these simple stories of real and honoured lives. It is a book, too, which boys will seize upon gladly, since it allows the subjects to speak for themselves, and attempts no moralizing. We know of no book which a father could better buy for his boys.—N. Y. Evening Mail.

—THREE SEASONS IN EUROPEAN VINEYARDS.—By William J. Flagg.—Besides being a summary of useful information concerning the produce of the grape, the present book contains an extremely pleasant sketch of travel, interspersed with many reflections of much interest and observations of considerable originality, affording a picture of a certain phase of French life unknown and unseen by ordinary tourists. It is full of that kind of entertaining reading which Sir Philip Sydney styles "trifle, triflingly handled;" and congenial fancy kindles over descriptions of the beautiful scenery, the oddities of local customs, the luxurious vineyards, the genial atmosphere, "the incense of fruitful summer, the incense of fruit-time," the village feasts and pastimes, and, rarest of all, the happy peasantry, not yet rendered unhappy by demagogues and visionaries.—Round Table.

—TRAVEL AND ADVENTURE IN THE TERRITORY OF ALASKA.—By Frederick Whymper.—This agreeable book of travel and adventure. * * * The purchase of Alaska by the United States Government has awakened a lively interest in that region; and whatever relates to its natural features, its inhabitants, its existing state, and its possible resources, comes to us with the two-fold charm of novelty and material interest. Mr. Whymper was able to take with him the requisite qualifications for breaking ground in that new and, in many respects, rough and uncivilized quarter, as the results of his exploration in the clearly-written and cleverly-illustrated volume before us testify. * * * All that is most original and striking in his narrative centres in his experiences of life in the lately-ceded territory, and in the estimate which
