

ENVOY.

Though none regard these shadows of bright things,
I saw at sunrise,—these faint imagings
Of one dear woman's fairness, but the few,
Whose hearts have taught them how their dreams come true,
And She, who gave me more than gems of price,
Herself,—and sweet thoughts of Her,—'twill suffice.