CANADA SHOULD LOCATE THE NORTH POLE.

Canada has a better claim to ownership of the North Pole than any other nation Our domain extends from the 49th paralle to the Pole, and if we do not own the whole of the imaginary point which goes by the name of the North Pole we can at least set up a legal title to a half interest in it. If the duty devolves upon any country to locate the North Pole that ountry is Canada. We are the nearest o it, and we have more interest than any other country in Arctic navigation By all means then let Canadians interest themselves in the quest for the Pole. The world will never be happy until the Pole is discovered. It will probably prove of no benefit whatever to reach the North Pole, but curiosity will be satisfied and explorers can then die happy. It would be a great feather in Canada's cap if a Canadian should be successful in locating the ultima thule of geographers. Capt. Bernier of Quebec thinks he can reach the Pole. He is ready to make the trial. Other countries have fitted out would find the past. As we grow less expensive expeditions to solve the great mystery.
