MR. ROSS AND THE REFERENDUM

Those who have read Premier Ross' speech may have been impressed, as it was that it was by much study and research that he had arrayed such an army of authorities in support of his referendum proposal.

Lord Salisbury, Mr. Lecky, Mr. Bryce, Miss Willard, Dr. Lyman Abbott and others were all quoted in a way calculated to create the impression that the Premier was a man of wide reading who had given deep and earnest study to his subject, and finds his referendum device for escape from political shipwreck sanctioned by high authority. But Mr. Ross was simply posing and pretending. He had never read one of the speeches or articles from which he pretended to quote. He found every one of his quotations in the appendix of one book, a sort of compilation of arguments and opinions favorable to the idea of direct legislation, made by Mr. Elwood Pomeroy of Newark, N.J. Mr. Ross' use of these quotations was the reverse of honest. Each one appears in Mr. Pomeroy's book, divorced from its context, and he did not know, and had no means of knowing, whether they accurately expressed the opinions of the writer, or not.

As a matter of fact, Mr. Pomeroy, when using the excerpts which Mr. Ross borrowed, did not attach to them the meaning the Premier did. He was dealing with the subject of direct legislation, which includes the initiative as well as the referendum, and nowhere within the three hundred and twenty odd pages of his book does he so much as hint at much less serious or less to be trusted, a referendum like the one Mr. Ross proposes. What Mr. Pomeroy contends for, and what he quotes Lord Salisbury, Miss Willard and others in support of, is the incorporation of direct legislation—the initiative and referendum—into the regular machinery of government, a very different thing from applying the referendum alone to an isolated question, and that for no better purpose than to enable an embittered politician to escape the consequences of his own duplicity. Mr. Pomeroy and Mr. J. W. Sullivan are the leading advocates of direct legislation in the United States, and neither they nor any other honest advocate of direct legislation would dream of proposing that the referendum should be used for the convenience of politicians, to help them overcome the troubles sure to spring up in the pathway of the tricky and unscrupulous. They advocate direct legislation as a means of "giving the people a veto on corrupt legislation," to quote the words of Hon. John W. Wainwright; because they think "it will do away with the boss, the bootlicker and the lobbyist," because they hope that it will "put corrupt politicians out of business by taking away from them the power to deliver the goods." But they advocate it always as a definite, permanent system, never as something to be applied now and again at the convenience of politicians.

Mr. Ross could have found, no doubt he did find, in Mr. Pomeroy's book many sound and cogent arguments in support of the incorporation of the principle of direct legislation into our Ontario system. How long would the scrap iron law or the Connec Act stand if the people, by means of the submission of an Act for their repeal, and could then, by the use of the referendum, put them out of existence? How much sooner would the Liberal leaders have been compelled to withdraw their protection from their Michigan lumbermen, had it been possible to submit to the direct vote of the people the question whether Canadians or foreigners should have the benefit of Canada's timber resources? With such a weapon as the referendum in their hands, how long would the long-suffering people of Ontario submit to the robbery of the school book ring? What would have been the fate of the government's various pulpwood deals if they had run the gauntlet of the referendum?

But not only did Mr. Ross make dishonest use of Mr. Pomeroy's excerpts by making them appear to support that which they did not and never were intended to support. He had the audacity to absolutely misrepresent what he found in the book. This is a serious charge to make against the Premier of the province, but the facts warrant it, and would justify the use of stronger language. Let us quote Mr. Ross' words: "In the United States, every constitutional amendment—and every state of the union, except Delaware, has the power to make constitutional amendments in that way—has been submitted to the people, and in every one of these cases, no far as I can ascertain, they are approved by a two-thirds majority." The first part of this statement Mr. Ross got from Mr. Pomeroy's book, page 2; the latter part is the coinage of his own brain and wholly untrue. In no case when one

The amendments to the constitution of any state, cited in Mr. Pomeroy's book, was submitted to a vote of the people was a two-thirds majority or anything more than a majority of the votes polled required. Mr. Ross' object in making his statement about the two-thirds majority is plain, but it is entirely untrue, and he cannot be allowed to plead even that he was mistaken. In Mr. Pomeroy's book, on the page from which he was quoting, is a footnote referring to the reader to Appendix No. 26, "The Referendum in Use," and No. 28, "A Review of Michigan Referendums." Appendix No. 26 covers 16 pages, and deals with referendum votes in 17 states. Some, but not all, of these were on constitutional amendments, but in not one single case was a two-thirds majority, or anything more than an ordinary majority, required. Appendix No. 28 tells of the submission of several bills to the people of Michigan on the subject of a referendum law, and of them a prohibitory liquor law, and here again only a bare majority was required in any case.

In going over Mr. Pomeroy's book Mr. Ross discovered another thing which, beyond all question, influenced him in the framing of his Act. This was that in no one instance when a referendum vote was taken in any state did the vote on the referendum equal the vote for governor or for presidential electors, and this the vote was taken at the same time and usually recorded on the same ballot. We commend this to the consideration of such gentlemen as Rev. John Potts, J. A. Macdonald, J. F. Ockley, Dr. Sutherland, Principal Caven and some more who are trying to persuade themselves and others that Mr. Ross is not asking the prohibitionists to attempt the impossible.

PRACTICAL V. IMPOSSIBLE TEMPERANCE.

One fact that the pending prohibition controversy has brought to the surface is that this province is ripe for some kind of common sense temperance legislation. Prohibition, never to be tolerated, but the people would readily accept any measure that would do away with, or diminish, the sale of liquor in saloons and taverns. People are coming to the conclusion that the saloon-keeper is not a necessary adjunct to the body politic. He could easily be dispensed with, and he would lose nothing if he went away back and forth. While the people will not stand for prohibition, they will readily listen to proposals for an improved method for the distribution of liquor. The saloon-keeper is a costly middleman, both financially and morally. If the temperance people directed their attention to the middleman and the system of distribution, instead of to the production of liquor, they would accomplish much more good. The country is ready for a radical change in the saloon business. The temperance sentiment in Ontario is strong enough to warrant a decrease of the saloons and taverns by fully 50 per cent. Indeed, many strong anti-prohibitionists would like to see both a diminution in the number of saloons and taverns and a radical change in the

OLD PEOPLE

Have a charm of their own when they are not weak and feeble, but hale and hearty, enjoying the sports and pleasures of youth though they cannot participate in them. The whole secret of a sturdy old age is this: Keep the stomach and organs of digestion and nutrition in perfect form. The young man who does not think of his stomach will be made to think of it as he grows old. It is the "weak" stomach, incapable of supplying the adequate nutrition for the body, that makes the weakness and feebleness of old age.

Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery cures diseases of the stomach and other organs of digestion and nutrition. It makes the "weak" stomach strong, and enables the body to be fully nourished and strengthened by the food which is eaten.

"I suffered for six years with constipation and several physicians but they could not reach my case," writes Mr. G. Popplewell of Eureka Springs, Cal. "I felt that there was no help for me, could not retain food on my stomach; had vertigo and would fall helplessly to the floor. Two years ago I commenced taking Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery and little by little, and improved from the start. My organs of digestion and nutrition were able to do light work, and have been improved ever since. I am now 60 years old for one of my age—50 years. I owe it all to Dr. Pierce's Common Sense Medical Discovery, in paper covers, is sent free on receipt of 31 one-cent stamps to pay expense of postage and mailing only. Address Dr. R. V. The Best Year's Work.

That the year 1901 was the very best in the history of the North American Life Assurance Company will be seen by its annual statement, which appears in our columns to-day. The applications received amounted to over six millions, and of this five and one-half millions were accepted, and policies issued, while about half a million was declined—a substantial proof, both of the popularity of the Company amongst insurers, and of the protection given to policyholders in the selection of only the best risks.

The amount of insurance now in force reaches just about $28,000,000, and in all important elements tending to its growth and prosperity the Company has made marked advances.

The income increased by over $100,000, now amounts to $1,009,396.58. The assets were increased during the year by $440,000, and now stand at $4,420,773.38.

The investments of the Company are of the highest order, and the fact that the auditor pointed out at the annual meeting, that the Company has never had a loss in the payment of interest in any of the debentures it holds, will bear tribute to the care and financial ability exercised by the management of the Company.

The policyholders of the Company, besides desiring to know that it is a thoroughly sound, well-managed institution, are mainly interested in its having a good round sum as net surplus, because from this source alone can profits be paid. In this respect the North American Life stands in the front rank, as it is claimed by the Company that its net surplus, now over half a million, is larger, in proportion to its liabilities, than that of any other home Company.

That it has done well for its policyholders is indicated by the acknowledgments it has received from them for the satisfactory returns paid to them under matured investment policies.

The Company paid out during the last year the large sum of $386,688 for death claims, profits, etc.

The North American Life is recognized amongst the leading established financial institutions; it has already passed its twenty-first year, and the President, in his address at the annual meeting, pointed out that each year in its history has marked a progressive and successful period.

The Company at its formation was exceptionally fortunate in having for its President a man held in the highest esteem and regard by all people—the late Hon. Alexander Macdonald—and at his death he was succeeded by Mr. John L. Blair, who is regarded as one of the leading financial authorities in this province.

The Vice-Presidents are Dr. James Thornburn and Sir William R. Meredith, the Managing-Director—that well-known expert actuary—Mr. William McCabe, F.I.A., ably assisted by Mr. L. Goldman, the Secretary.
