That the Kaiser will ever give his upon her. consent to the morganatic marriage is highly improbable. He holds most exalted notions of the social obligations imposed by the possession of Hohenzollern blood and relationship with his august self. Such a marriage as the prince is bent on would constitute a mesalliance of the most glaring character. And it would be the first mesalliance to be contracted by a member of the royal house of Prussia.

The only thing to be said in its favor Is that since the prince became enamored of the still sprightly, though no longer youthful soubrette of the Trianon Theater here, he has sobered down considerably and no longer leads the riotous life of a royal night roller. hand. I thought it would go away, but instead of doing so, it got worse. A patch of about four inches square became inflamed, then the skin broke and the sore mattered and discharged freely. Not only was it very unsightly, but it was very painful, too. In spite of my care it got worse, and to my great alarm a second inflamed patch appeared on my left hand. This was followed by an outbreak on my arm, and on the calf of my leg. The pain from these patches was terrible.

At times, when they got thoroughly warm they itched until I could hardly bear. I used ointments and salves of all kinds, but got no benefit. One day I read a report in the newspaper of how a case of eczema of long standing had been cured by Zam-Buk. I had tried so many things in vain that I doubted whether Zam Buk could cure me. My wife advised me to try it and I did so. The first few applications gave me relief from the terrible itching, and also soothed the pain. I cleansed the wounds thoroughly once daily, and applied Zam Buk as directed. Within a few days there was a marked improvement, and gradually the wounds began to close. The discharging ceased, and the skin began to grow again. Within a short time of commencing with the Zam-Buk treatment all the four wounds were not only closed up, but all the patches were covered with new, healthy skin. I consider Zam-Buk a wonderful balm, and shall always recommend it to my friends. If it can care such serious skin diseases as mine was, it must be a very speedy cure for severe cuts and slight injuries sustained in one's every day work. I shall always keep a box handy."
