New Plans Prepared For Workmen's Housing Scheme

Building Inspector Has Four or Five Ready.

Building Inspector A. M. Piper now has ready four or five plans of houses which he believes could be built for a comparatively reasonable amount, and which he will submit to the housing commission on Wednesday. He has not secured estimates on all of them yet, but he thinks the prices would run from $2,000 to $3,000. Also, with one exception, they have not yet received the approval of the provincial housing authorities, but as they vary if at all only very slightly from the specifications laid down in the provincial regulations, and as the housing controller has already expressed the opinion that

GREAT CHANGES IN TOWNSHIP OF LONDON SINCE IT WAS ORGANIZED AS MUNICIPALITY IN YEAR 1819

Great Picnic Tomorrow, Not Only To Mark 100th Birthday, But To Welcome Home the Men Who Served Their Country Overseas.

One hundred years ago on the first day of January, 1819, the first meeting for municipal organization of the township of London was held at the house of Joshua Applegarth by order of Thomas Talbot and Daniel Springer (two of His Majesty's Justices of Peace), for the purpose of nominating "fit and proper persons to serve in offices for said year."

In the meantime, a century has rolled round, a century which has witnessed the passes of the basses of the country; the disappearance of forests and the wild animals that roamed therein; the exchange of the ox cart for the high geared automobile; he building up of a new world, London; the coming of the trolley and electric power for ligting, industrial and commercial purposes; and finally the arrival of the conqueror of the air, the airplane.

The special guests of the occasion will be entertained at luncheon by the ladies of two white people within the township, which is recorded is that of Thomas Carling, and Margaret, daughter of Thomas Routledge, parents of the late Sir John Carling.
