Says Headlines Misleading.

Before proceeding with the business of the convention this morning. Senator Robertson said he felt compelled to appeal to the press generally in connection with the headings appearing in the papers. The articles themselves were very fair and accurate, but the men who prepared the headlines were giving the people a wrong impression. men who prepared the headlines were giving the people a wrong impression.

A. C. Hay, Winnipeg, said the conference had been called as a national affair. The speaker said he had gone overseas with the first Canadian contingent to fight for international democracy, and he came to this convention in the hope of making a stand for Canadian democracy. He hoped for unity in the conference and good results would accrue.

dian democracy. He noped for unity in the conference and good results would accrue.

Mr. Shaw of Woodstock had said the men in his plant were not organized. All Mr. Hay had to say about that was that it "was an awful thing." Collective bargaining was one of the great needs of labor today.

Labor Asks Legislation.

Mr. Hay said the labormen were not asking consideration. They wanted legislation making collective bargaining effective. Canada had lost two and a half million days work since 1901 for the right of collective bargaining, and if it could be settled now there would be a great saving to the Dominion.

Mr. Hay hoped the term "the opposition" would not be used much longer in referring to the employers' group. The men who said they had worked eighteen or twenty hours in building up their business should not necessarily pass that on to the next generation.

Collective Bargaining. pass that on to the next generation.

Collective Bargaining.

A. B. Weeks, a Vancouver manufacturer, thought if the corner stone of justice and equity could be laid this conference had been justified. Dealing with collective bargaining, Mr. Weeks was quoting from the report of the royal commission on industrial relations, when he was pulled up by Tom Moore one of the members of that commission, who pointed out to Mr. Weeks that he was not quoting the
