months since he had first started to take up a collection for the Sick Children's Hospital, and as usual he was at his place on the city hall steps. Hundreds and hundreds of dollars had he collected, and he was indeed the little hero dog of the city. Would you believe it. Rastus was not a bit vain any more. He had learned that a dog should do its duty without being proud of his accomplishments, but just the same he did like to think he was a little bit important after all.

"Yes, there was a great number of dogs at the dog show," said a man as he passed Rastus. "How the little dog did prick up his ears then. So there was a dog show in town! Were Pete and Tim, his old friends there, and had they won prizes? he asked himself.

Poor Rastus, he could not carry out his work that afternoon, so eager was he to find out all about his old friends. For the very first time since he had been stationed there, he deserted his post, and ran off. Where to, do you suppose? Why to find the dog show, to be sure. As luck would have it the building, where the dog show was held was not far away, and Rastus' sharp little ears soon picked up the sound of barking dogs that led him to the door. What a barking the dogs set up as the stripped past the man at the door without being seen.

What a barking the dogs set up as little dog, he had accomplished the and little dog, he had accomplished the and look.

Rastus suddenly realized what it all meant. By trying to be just a good little dog, he had accomplished the ambition of his life—and was really and truly a very important little fellow. After bidding his old friends good-bye and wishing them the best of luck, he was off again to the place on the city hall steps—for there was lots of money yet to be collected, and Rastus did love doing his duty, even better than being important, which shows, that after all he was a fine little dog.

Yellow 'mums and roses lent their beauty to the rooms of Mrs. Frank Lawson's home on Cheapside street, Monday afternoon, when her daughter, marriage. The hostess was wearing a handsome gown of dark brown velvet with corsage of Sweetheart roses, while her mother, who received with her, was in black and wore orchids at her girdle. Many guests called on the young bride, and were ushered to the tea room by Mrs. Ray Lawson, who wore a black velvet gown and smart from the first time since her family, who are spending the winter in Florida.

Tuesday at 5 6 clock, when Huella, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. H. M. Doug-lass of 206 Central avenue, was united in marriage to Dean Rchmond Russell, Phm.B., son of the late Mr. and Mrs.

T. R. Russell of this city, the Rev. Jas. MacKay officiating. The bride, was becomingly attired in a smart frock of navy blue charmeuse and wore the groom's gift, a necklace of pearls, and her corsage was of Ophelia roses and orchids. For soing away the bride wore the gift of her father, a handsome seal coat trimmed with beaver collar and cuffs. After the honeymoon, which will be spent in Detroit and Cincinnati, the young couple will take up their temporary residence at the home of the bride's parents, during the absence of the family, who are spending the winter in Florida.

The many and beautiful gifts received by the young couple testify to tea room by Mrs. Ray Lawson, who wore a black velvet gown and smart black hat. Here a silver basket of the high esteem in which they are yellow flowers centred the tea table over which presided, Mrs. F. G. Newton of Sarnia, a house guest, and Mrs. H. E. Held Prayer Service For

At the regular meeting of the local W.C.T.U. yesterday afternoon, Mrs. May R. Thornley called attention to the fact that the voters' lists were posted in the postoflice and he city clerk's office and that any adding of new names would have to be done before November 19. She referred to the fact that 50,000 new names would become eligible for the list this year, and that the Government had postponed the taking of the referendum so that the new names might be added. Mrs. Thornley urged the members to see that their names were on the list.

The prayer service at the meeting, conducted by the Rev. H. B. Robinson, took the form of a petition on behalf of the Rev. Leslie Spracklin of Windsor and his wife. Mr. Robinson paid a big tribute to Mr. Spracklin and letters of sympathy and delight at his exoneration were sent from the union to Mr. Spracklin and Mrs. Spracklin.
