ray for Saturday.

The members of the Women's Canadian Club are looking forward to the visit of the celebrated Canadian poet, Bliss Carmen, to the city on Friday, February II. Of his work in Canadian literature, John W. Garvin, editor of Canadian Poets, says:

"A visit of interest to literary men is that of William Archer, the noted authority on British literature. He addressed a fine gathering of Toronto writers recently." 'A recent reading of the published writers recently.

verse of Bliss Carmen has convinced me that he must soon be widely recog-nized as a poet of pre-eminent genius. He is greater than some of more ex-tended fame, for the reason that his poetry expresses a nobler and more com-prehensive philosophy of life and being. Bliss Carmen has achieved more greatly than many others of this generation than many others of this generation, because he has realized more fully than they, that the Infinite Poet is constantly and eternally seeking media for expression, and that the function of a finite poet is to steadily improve the instrument, to keep it expectantly in tune and to record the masterpleces."

THE CURIOUS PUP. Part Fifteen.

Part Fifteen.

Nibbles hardly dared take a breath, for fear that the glant would step on him. He wondered, too, what the glant would do if he spied him. The poor little mayor and the tiny citizen lay where they had fallen in their faint, and Nibbles was quite concerned for their welfare. He leaned over and licked their faces, and soon brought them, too.

"Climb back into my ear," he whispered to them. "This giant won't hurt you. He looks a very kind man."

Of course, Nibbles didn't know whether the glant was a kind man or not, he was just saying that to make the poor little mayor and the tiny citizen feel more comfortable.

ROLD CARPETS AWAY

"Bow, wow," Nibbles barked at last, for he could stand the suspense no longer.

The giant looked down at Nibbles in surprise, and then what a shout of laughter came from his lips.

"What a funny-looking little mouse!" he laughed. "Come here until I put my foot on vou."

"Bow, wow," Nibbles barked at last, for he could stand the suspense no longer.

"Bow, wow," Nibbles barked at last, for he could stand the suspense no longer.

"What a funny-looking little mouse!" he laughed. "Come here until I put my foot on vou."

"Bow, wow," Nibbles barked back, this time in genuine fear, for he thought his last minute had come. Nibbles could feel the little mayor and the tiny citizen trembling in his ear, too, and he hoped they wouldn't fall out.

"Why, it's a dog, and such a tiny one!" the big man cried in dismay, and with that he picked Nibbles up, sat him in the palm of his great hand and inspected him closely.

Nibbles sat up on his hind legs and pleaded with the big man to leave him alone—only he had to plead with his eyes and by wiggling his body, for wonderful to relate, his power of speech had suddenly fied, and he was just like any other little dog of the world.

"I'm not going to hurt you. You are the smallest dog I ever saw. You must

"I'm not going to hurt you. You are "I'm not going to hurt you. You are the smallest dog I ever saw. You must be the smallest dog that ever was," the glant declared. "I am going to take you back to my friends. We will put you in a circus. Oh, goodness me, oh, my, my, ha, ha ha," and the big man laughed until poor Nibbles was nearly shaken from his hand. How the little mayor and the tiny citizen had to hang on to keep from falling from Nibbles' ear. What was to befall them now that they were in the power of the glant?

Ingersoll, Jan 31.—Under Masonic auspices, and attended by crowds that completely filled St. Paul's Presby-terian Church, funeral services were conducted this afternoon for Joseph Stalker, for eight years principal of the local public school. The pupils marched in a body to the church with their teachers. The coffin was banked with many beautiful floral tributes. The service was conducted by Rev. George W. E. V. McMillen while School Inspector R. A. Paterson paid a touching tribute to Mr. Stalker's work as a critizen and his efficiency as a teacher. The palibearers were R. B. Hutt, H. W. Beatty, R. A. Paterson, E. N. McMary, W. J. Peters, John Lee.
