Added to the Long List due to This Famous Remedy.

Glanford Station, Ont.—"I have taken Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound for years and never found any medicine to compare with it. I had ulcers and falling of the uterus, and doctors did me no good. I suffered then until I began taking your medicine. It has also helped other women to whom I have recommended it."—Mrs. Florence Clark, Glanford Station, Ontario.

Another Cure Harvey Bank, N. B.—"I can highly recommend Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound to any suffering woman. I have taken it for several weeks and it has cured me."—Miss M. F. BARBOUR.

Because your case is a delicate one, doctors having done you up, you do not continue to suffer with pain. Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound is a safe, reliable, and effective remedy for many cases of female illness, such as inflammation, ulceration, discharges, fibroid tumors, irregularities, nervous prostration, etc. It costs only a trifle to try it, and the result is worth millions to many suffering women.

An Easter Egg

A jolly gang of fore folks to play a very little game for April. "No" is appropriate to confine this amusement to the very little people, for it would make an unnecessary entertainment to introduce an Easter luncheon party where the Easter egg enters into the scheme of table decorations. Place six eggs, which have been colored green, red, black, blue, yellow and one left white, in a row or basket of moss, or bran, leaving some space between. One of the players is blindfolded and then provided with a light stick or wand. With this she carefully touches one of the eggs, feeling slowly and distinctly at the same time.

Though Mr. Howard Brown, at one time a New York business man, is living on the yacht at Brightlingsea, Eng., the English courts have decided that he is a resident of that country and must pay an income tax. Mr. Brown bought the Valfréya, a large steam yacht, twenty years ago, and she has been lying in the harbor at Brightlingsea, Eng., since then he has lived on board and the vessel has never stirred from her mooring.

HOW IT FEELS TO GO UP IN THE AIR

A Trip With The Sopwith One of The Most Successful English Aviators

Martyn Johnson writes as follows of a trip in the air made with Thos. Sopwith the English aviator who recently won the De Forest prize of $20,000 for flying across the English channel and who afterward was received by his majesty King George on the golf links of Windsor Castle.

He is a lithe-built young Britisher with the thin clean-cut face and keen blue eyes of his race. I found him as unsatisfactory to interview as he was satisfactory to fly with. Before the afternoon was over I decided that because he was so all-sobered in flying, in the thing-itself, that he is oblivious to everything else. About himself and his achievements he was uncommunicative as a man could well be about his airplane he was the most fascinating of narrators.

I had never before been nearer an aeroplane than a newspaper cut. Upon this covering that he led the way across the great ground at Brooklands, with all the enthusiasm of a child with a toy, to where the ungainly craft stood, fitting and dipping unceasingly in the wind.

The afternoon was gay and while we waited for the wind to die down he showed me about the several sheds, pointing out in simple terms the significant points in the several models. Showing me the new monoplane which he is building, so far I discovered his chief interest was with the engines, but now he was turning his attention to the construction of the craft.

It was easy to discover with an only half an eye that he always had been an enthusiast. He was one of the earliest in England to take an interest in the motor cycle. Having exhausted the possibilities for speed in that direction he turned his fresh energy to motors, only to relinquish them for the flying machine.

It was only last October that he took up flying and in the brief intervening months he has come to the fore of aviators the world over, but one would not dream to see him on the grounds at Brooklands. There he is on the happiest terms with every one. There are a lot of men many years his senior in years or experience, but there is no suggestion of jealousy on his account. Perhaps that is as much because of the fine sportsmanship that characterizes the English, as of Sopwith's own gentleness.

While we were waiting several aviators went up in monoplanes, and Mr. Morrison, actually soaring out of sight like a moustique in mid-air. I was breathless at the prospect, yet it seemed so commonplace, so simple and normal, that I felt the rather natural apprehension vanish.

Immediately after tea Sopwith announced that the wind was favorable for flying. I was as ready as I ever could be to do the thing, perhaps, I bundled up in the sweaters and mufflers which he had provided.

Carefully I climbed up into the frail skeleton of the machine and took my position on the tiny seat which was to hold all there was between me and terra firma for the next few minutes. I should have preferred several strong straps to fasten me in place, but there was none. Sopwith climbed up and took his seat before my knees, the steering gear, before him.

On the canvas screen over the steering gear I had a map of the course which he had proposed taking in the cross-country flight. It was a simple matter to follow the ground with that daring swiftness with which a bird flies.

I was exulting in the wonderful speed and wondering when we were going to rise into the air when I discovered that some people were looking up at us. I shall soon forget the amazement with which I discovered that he was in the air and that there had been no terrifying suspense of lapping off into space.

The wind was a piercing gale about us, but we soared up with all the splendid dash of an eagle, every fibre of the delicate craft taut with the wind, pulling slightly as the engine started.

We made a wide, graceful curve, veering slightly as we came up against the wind, working up slowly, steadily. The engine, of smooth, elegant, unadorned lines was perfectly exhilarating. Instead of perceiving a sense of fear or dizziness, such as had often been mine in looking down from an elevation, there was only a marvelous feeling of freedom. Our flight was as spontaneous as thinking. There was no more thought of falling than a swimmer knows as he moves on the sliding board, treading water with fatiguesless depths below.

Baseball

Although the formal organization of the league had to be deferred, yet last night's meeting of the base ball promoters in the city resulted in things taking on a more definite shape in many respects. For one thing it was settled that the city will receive a favorable answer. This will mean that the interests of the fans, that the most important thing, for pro ball means good ball. No formal action was made to this effect by all the teams, but nevertheless the ball is rolling in that direction.

Representatives were present from the St. Peter's, St. Johns and Marathons ball teams. The Clippers by not sending a delegate hinted that they are out of the business, and it is thought if they play ball in the summer it will be purely amateur. St. Peter's have also decided to remain amateur, for the most part at least. For after considerable discussion their representative announced that they would not enter. Tommy Coughlan, on behalf of the Shamrocks, a new ball club of the city, made application for this team, and there is no doubt that they will receive a favorable answer. This will mean a league of three teams if nothing else.

Mr. Coughlan also said that the Shamrocks would be willing to go the pace with the Marathons and St. Johns in regard to the importance of pro.

B. Donald and Dr. Malcolm, on behalf of the Pirates and the grounds, submitted a proposition to the teams. Messrs. Simons and Coughlan, of the St. Johns and Shamrocks said they were not in a position to enter into any agreement until their clubs had been considered, and it was decided to postpone the organization of the league until April 19, when another meeting will be held.

Work on the ground stand on the Shamrock grounds will be started next week. The old stand is to be thoroughly repaired and fifty feet will be added to it.

HAS ANCIENT COPY OF THE MAGNA CHARTA

Valuable Old English Document is in the Possession of a Halifax Man

During the course of a conversation last evening between some well known city gentlemen casual reference was made to a document relating to the agreement between King John and the Barons of Runnymede being found in a book, it developed that there is in Halifax a most precious document, one of only four of its kind which ever existed and in all probability the only one of the four in America.

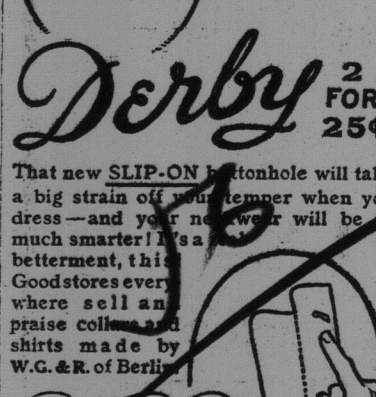

After the great fire in London two or three centuries ago when the tower of London was greatly endangered and the existence of the original magna charta document had been jeopardized, a few copies of this historical document might have been made by fire and by the loss of the original it was decided to authorize four reproductions on parchment with the signatures and seals as in the original attachment. The four copies were prepared identical with the original and were so placed with officials that the original and the four reproductions could never be in danger of destruction at the same time.

The four copies were handed down to Halifax families through the centuries and it is one of these four that is now in Halifax, being in the possession of a well known citizen, connected with a big commercial English family. He regards the document as almost priceless and the fear of destruction by fire seems to have been considered a suggestion to exhibit it at the Provincial Exhibition, only the fact that it was in the hands of a private citizen prevented. He was offered $5,000 for the document but refused the offer, and it would require at least a few thousand in advance of that offer to get him to think of selling it at all.

It's a pity that the average detective can't locate criminals as easily as he can find clues.

AMUSEMENTS FOR OURSELVES AND OTHERS

It must have been gratifying to Gertrude Holmes and Robert Buchanan at the Nickel yesterday—particularly in the evening—to receive such a hearty welcome to a city, and to a showhouse where they had played so often. On their every appearance they were heartily welcomed and after their rich little programme had been gone through with they were accorded another mild ovation. Both were in excellent voice and both were immaculately attired, as usual. Miss Holmes, in her second number, appeared in a charming gown of white satin with silver sequined and cut glass ornaments. Her partner, Mr. Buchanan, in a charming gown of white satin with silver sequined and cut glass ornaments. The picture included Gertrude's plaintive story, Selling Old Master; the western yarn, The Man From The East; and two roasting Esauy comedies. Jack Morrissey was a hot favorite again in his song, I'll Build a Fence Around You. On Thursday he is going to sing that great lower's hit-song, Set 'Em Up in the Other Alley.

SPRING SKIN TROUBLES

Pimples, Eruptions and "Spotty Complexions"

All this season, scores of people—girls especially—have been suffering from skin troubles. The skin needs attention—needs renovating after the trying time of winter. You have been at one moment perspiring from skating, or some other exercise, and then you have stood to "cool off" at a temperature equal to summer heat. Then you have covered your skin in a heavy coat of winter clothing. The skin of the face and neck shows signs of needing attention.

Zan-Buk and Zan-Buk Soap are the remedies. Smear Zan-Buk lightly over the spots, the eruptions, the yellow patches, the pimples, the spots, the spots, the spots. Only Zan-Buk Soap will do it. Zan-Buk Soap (only one) is the only skin medicine that does not irritate the skin. It is the only skin medicine that does not irritate the skin. It is the only skin medicine that does not irritate the skin.

Zan-Buk is also a sure cure for skin eruptions and pimples. Mothers will find Zan-Buk Soap best for baby's bath. All druggists and stores at 50c. box for Zan-Buk and 25c. tablet or 3 for 75c. for the soap. If you have any difficulty in obtaining, order from Zan-Buk Co. Toronto, and send price.

SHE HAD IT DOWN PAT. The weekly lesson in Sunday school dealt with the corrupting influence of luxury and worldliness, and the golden text was a well known sentence that the superintendent wished all the children to remember, says the St. Paul Dispatch.

It sounded like an easy text to learn and the superintendent, mounting the platform for a final review of the lesson when the school assembled for closing exercises, was sure of a plangent response from his pupils.

"Who," he began, "can repeat the golden text?"

A score of hands were raised and the superintendent chose a little girl with blue eyes, a well bred, well behaved little girl from a well to do and "particular" family, to repeat the text for him.

"Well, Dorothy," he said, "you may tell us, stand up so we can all hear you." Dorothy stood up in the prettiness of her best dress and the daintiness of her hair ribbons.

PRACTICAL ARITHMETIC PROBLEM. A man went into a restaurant and called for an apple dumpling. The waiter brought it, but the man on looking it over decided that he would rather have a piece of pumpkin pie. So the waiter made the exchange and the man ate the pie. Then he got up and started to go out, when the waiter asked him to pay for what he had eaten.

"Why, I gave you the dumpling for the pie," he answered. "Yes, but then you should pay for the dumpling," argued the waiter. "That wouldn't be right, for I didn't eat the dumpling," retorted the man as he went out.

The waiter—not being very quick at figures—couldn't see anything wrong with this reasoning, and yet he found that he was five cents out. What do you make of it?
