POLICE COURT

Chappey Beat Man Whom He Saw Walking With His Wife—Liquor Case Adjourned

Police court was held at an early hour this morning, and Magistrate Ritchie disposed of considerable business in short order. Bernard Kennedy, arrested for drunkeness in St. David street, was fined $3 or two months with hard labor. Arthur Howe was remanded on a like charge, and Emest Harriety was fined $4 or ten days jail for intoxication; Amos Pedersen, a Norwegian sailor, the same.

Charles Chappey, an Englishman, was charged with having assaulted James O'Leary. Chappey said that when he was going to work in Peters' tannery in Erin street, yesterday afternoon, he saw his wife going down the street with O'Leary. Both were drunk, he said, and O'Leary bad a bottle of whisky in his possession. Chappey took hold of him and beat him. O'Leary in court presented a sorry spectacle. His face and neck were swollen and his head cut. He was charged with drunkenness.
