Visit of the Marchioness of Donegal Recalls Her Marriage—Her Son's Many Titles—An Irish Earl's Golden Wedding

(Copyright, 1911, by the Brentwood Company)

Arriving in New York on Tuesday, on board the S. S. Olympic was the widowed Marchioness of Donegal, a Canadian by birth, being a daughter of the late Henry St. George Twining of Halifax. The Marchioness' career is a strange one. When quite a girl, she, as Violet Twining, became engaged to an English officer stationed in Belgium, at Halifax. When the war in South Africa broke out and he was ordered into the field, she and her mother followed him to Cape Town, and when in the early stages of the conflict he was killed in action, it was found that he had made a will at Cape Town just before proceeding to the front, in which he bequeathed to her the whole of his very large fortune.

Two years afterwards, Miss Twining, then twenty-two, married, first before the register in London, and afterwards in St. George's church, Hanover Square, the aged Marquis of Donegal, repeatedly bankrupt and eight years of age at that time, fully three-score years the senior of his bride. It is said that the marriage was originally brought about through an advertisement inserted by the marquis in the London newspapers in the summer of 1902, in which he offered the title of marquis and a seat in Westminster Abbey for the coronation of Edward VII. in return for a marriage settlement of $100,000. The union, however, did not take place prior to the coronation. In fact, the matter could not be negotiated in time, and it was only after the coronation that the aged marquis, with his long white side whiskers, of the Dundreary type and his mass of white hair, was introduced to the society of the Isthmian Club in London, by a mutual friend, Colonel A. J. Gordon Kane, of Brooklyn. Miss Twining is reported to have settled, not $100,000, but $40,000, upon the marquis, who did not, however, live very long to enjoy it. He died some eighteen months later after being presented with a son and heir a very fine boy.

Lady Donegal and the marquis were not, however, a very united couple for she left England with her mother eight or nine weeks after her wedding for a prolonged tour in the east. Lord Donegal remaining behind on the ground that his age rendered him unable to put up with the fatigues of travel.

Presented at Court Lady Donegal was presented at court prior to her marriage, by the Lord and the Marchioness of Donegal, who gave her away on the occasion of her marriage.

Lady Donegal is now seven years of age and in spite of his being still in his nineties and his being a British Lord high admiral. This dignity comes to him by inheritance along with the dukedom of Devonshire, the dukedom of Chester and the Barony of Hereford, etc. His naval office is that of hereditary Lord high admiral of the North Sea, which is the largest lake, not merely of Ireland, but also of the United Kingdom, covering an area of 63 miles. The title dates back to the sixteenth and seventeenth centuries when the lake having occurred.

He is a member of the House of Lords, and there has been some talk in recent years of an attempt to recover possession of these estates.

The present Marquis' lands possess a large estate in the county of Donegal, Ireland, and he is entitled to wear at court and on state occasions the uniform of a Lord high admiral, which is of immense value, comprising nearly all the land around Lough Neagh, as well as the greater part of the city of Belfast. Most of the property was, however, alienated by the third Marquis of Donegal, whose son predeceased him, and who thereupon left everything that he could to his daughter, married to the eighth Earl of Shaftesbury, and there has been some talk in recent years of an attempt to recover possession of these estates.

There is more of the latter in this section of the country than all other diseases put together, and until the last few years was supposed to be incurable. For a great many years doctors pronounced it a local disease and prescribed local remedies, and by constantly failing to cure with local treatment, it increased in incurability. The best answer to the Tory assertion that the New Brunswick farmer does not take advantage of his opportunities is found in Aroostook Co., Maine. The New Brunswick farmers who went there and got access to the larger market at once began to make money, and today they travel in automobiles. Give our farmers at home the same chance and watch them grow.

A woman always tries to make a secret of what she doesn't know. The laughter and tears of a woman are equally deceptive.

Irish Peer's Golden Wedding Lord Belmonte, who has just celebrated his golden wedding at Castle Cook, near Enniskillen, in County Fermanagh, the home of his family since the reign of Queen Elizabeth, is the senior of all the representative peers of Ireland, having been elected to represent the Irish peerage in the House of Lords as far back as in 1837. Forty years ago he was in Australia as governor and commander-in-chief of New South Wales, and it was while staying with him at Sydney that King Edward's sailor brother, the late Duke of Edinburgh and of Saxe-Coburg Gotha, was in danger by an attempt made upon his life by Farrell, Lord Belmonte, who in spite of his being an anti-home-ruer, is married to a member of the Gladstone family, has three sons and no fewer than ten daughters, only one of whom is married. As he is obliged to make provision for them all, it is no wonder that he has been taking advantage of the land act to sell off most of his Irish estates.

These, according to the historian Froide, were obtained by his ancestor, James Corry, after the defeat of the cause of James II., on the plea that he had been of great assistance to King William and had suffered for his loyalty; whereas the facts were that he had had his home in Enniskillen (the name of King William's adherents for his hostility to the latter). His great-grandson, Armar Corry, was created Baron Belmonte in 1781, partly for his services in obstructing the policy of Grattan in the Irish House of Commons, and partly because he was the father of the daughter of the Earl of Buckinghamshire, Lord Lieutenant of Ireland; and sixteen years later he was created Viscount Belmonte for his support in the Irish House of Lords, of the administration of Lord Camden, the victory who guided the Irish people into rebellion in order to carry the union. The present earl is the fourth of his line. A well known member of his family was Lord Belmonte's private secretary, Montague Corry, Lord Rowton.

AFTER SUFFERING YEARS Cured by Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. Fox Creek, N.S.—"I have always had pains in the joints and weakness here, and after many years of suffering I can walk with ease. I have encouraged many mothers of families to take it, as it is the best remedy in the world. You can publish this in the papers."—Mrs. WILLIAM BURQUET, Fox Creek, N.S., Canada.

The above is only one of the thousands of grateful letters which are constantly being received by the Pinkham Medicine Company of Lynn, Mass., which prove beyond a doubt that Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, made from roots and herbs, actually does cure these obstinate diseases of women after all other means have failed, and that every such suffering woman owes it to herself to at once give Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound a trial before submitting to an operation, or giving up of recovery.

Mrs. Finkham, of Lynn, Mass., writes all sick women to write for advice. She has guided thousands to health and her price is free.

SAY SCANTY SKIRTS ARE CLOSING MILLS. Paris, Sept. 7—Among the notes in the "Revue des Francais" is a somewhat alarming report of the effect of modish dresses upon commerce. The Chamber of Commerce of Tarare, in a recent report, draws attention to the slump in local manufactures and suggests parliamentary intervention. Tarare is especially celebrated for its cotton linings, but scanty skirts have brought about what is stated to be an agonizing stoppage of work.

Dresses which formerly required from twelve to fourteen metres of lining now need only five, with the result that many mill-wheels do not move, and that numbers of weavers and dyers are thrown out of work altogether, or are put on short time. The hope is expressed that leading dressmakers will come to the rescue, and that another fashion will anticipate sump-tuary laws.

The Evening Chit-Chat

By RUTH CAMERON

AREN'T you too hard on your own sex, Miss Cameron? No one of my reader friends questions me. I wonder. It is a new point of view on myself, to me.

But really I don't think I am. To be sure I may point out feminine foibles more frequently and forcibly than I do the masculine, but that's only as a man could tell you the weak points and inaccuracies of the house in which he lives better than those of a neighbor's house.

I assure you, I do not find more fault with my sex, because I think they have more faults. Not by any means. Please attend, Mrs. Critic, while I try to vindicate myself from your criticism. I know five obstinate men to one obstinate woman. The very pretty, unusually attractive girl may think that every man is ready to fall in love with her, and not be so very far out of the way either.

But almost every man, however homely, however stupid, however unattractive, fancies himself an all powerful lady-killer. As Elmor Glynn put it: "It does not matter what the size of a man is, his vanity is just the same. A shrimp's five foot is unable to understand why a lovely goddess does not drop like a ripe peach into his mouth."

I know five egotistical men to one egotistical woman. I know five families where the pathway of some lord of creation must be paved into smoothness by the inconveniences and comfort sacrifices of the feminine members of the family, to one where the case is reversed. The contrast between men's fidelity and women's fidelity is too much a truism to need mention.

On the other hand it seems to me that women are first as broad-minded as men, almost never as altruistic, as interested in the good of humanity in general. Women, I think, are more jealous after marriage, men before. Men are more just, women more merciful. There, perhaps I am still under indictment, but I hope not for I have truly tried to borrow a masculine virtue and be neither hard on my own sex nor too other, but simply "just" to both.

To Produce Best Results Flour Must Be Properly Aged

MILLS with insufficient storage capacity are forced to ship their flour before it is properly aged. Underaged flour requires expert handling in order to secure even fair results. In our big warehouses in six different cities we have storage capacity for 370,000 (98-pound) bags. We are thus able to store "Purity" Flour until it is properly aged.

You can never get underaged flour if you always specify "Purity." Good results come easiest and sweetest with "Purity" Flour.

"MORE BREAD AND BETTER BREAD."

PURITY FLOUR. Purity Flour is packed in 7, 14, 24, 49 and 99 pound cotton sacks. Also in 5 and 10 lb. half-barrels.
