BNOA. D. STEWART, TORONTO. Drivert sorted it Old I do not feet One bifter pang at what you say to me, And I am glad to have you here to kneel By my bedside while early shadows flee. I've thought sometimes I'd be afraid to die, But now, I yield my life without a sigh.

Distinct comes every scene before my eye, I see the dear old house upon the hill, The silver stream that wimples gently by, And I can smell, altho' I'm far away, The sweetness of the new and fragrant hay

How I remember every shady walk, Each plundered nest along the scented wa Of voices that long since are hushed for ave : In these long nights the worls they said to Have never been, and ne'er forgot can be.

I see before me now the grand old oak Bearing my name in letters deep and wide And I remember as a child I spoke To the sweet sister standing by my side. And said, "In after years we'l! often look At this old tree in this cool, peaceful nook."

Where in those days these promises were made And now I cannot see again that face, For in the green old graveyard it is laid-Golf knows though, tears have dropped when a language thought.

Of all those days, and memories they brought.

I fancy I can hear the merry cry Of vil age lads at play upon the green, And see the flashing of a brother's eye In timny a contest keen-He, too, has gone since these mad, joyous days, For soldier's blood must spill in country's frays.

The evening songs, the church bell as it rang Across the meadows, and the big blue hill The little choir in which I sat and sang, The rushing hum of water at the mill, The days that seemed so short but were so

Oh I to be back amongst them just to night. But more distinct and dearer still than all. In this last hour of mine I seem to her My mother speaking, and the gentle fall. Of her loved footsteps-strike upon my ear, And i can see her standing as she used to stand Beside my cot, my hand in her dear hand.

The evening prayer I never missed to say, With folded hand ore I lay down to rest, Has been forgotten now for many a day, But not the love of that pure, tender breast Tell her when dying that ! spoke of this, And mourned because I died without her kiss

How I remember all her anxious fears, How oft she warned me of its weary strife, Her solveyes filled the while with bur

And if I shed one now it is because I know I'll ne'er see her again whom Hove so.

Her last words still are ringing is my ear, Tell her they lived until I had to die. Remember thy Creator, have no fear God bless you, durling, think of me, good bye. And then she ching to me; they were too tru The words she spoke,"I cannot part with you.

I could not know while standing at her side, A id drying with my lips her silver tears, That I would even float apon a tide Of sin in after years.

Nothing but brightness there was in my past,

And so I took my-leave of her - my first, my last
