created and arrangements made for the government of our Canadian North West there is no doubt that it was the aim of the French members of the House of Commons to so direct matters that Manitoba and the North West would become new Quebecs and that French influence would be the dominating one in that part of Canada. It was to secure this end that the use of French as an official language and the separate school system were fastened on Manitoba and the North West, and the French repatration scheme for the purpose of removing French Canadians rom the United States had no disposition to return and become farmers in Manitoba was a part of the same design. This hopeful plan fa.led because nature was too strong for the French. The Quebec French who had gone to the United States had no disposition to return and become farmers in Manitoba the French royal assent to the Act. The opinion is quoted of Lords Selbourne, the French in Quebec were not sufficiently enterprising to go to the North West filteen. The demand of certain French Conservatives that the government shall oppose the referring of the matter to the North-West legislature or to the people of the territories is an unreasonable one and certainly should not be granted. It might please the French for a moment until some new whim seized them, but it would mortally offend the English-speaking settlers, who ought to have something to say in regard to a question of such importance. The process of waking Canada a French preserve must be checked, and the French people must be plainly given to understand that while Quebec may be a French province the rest of Canada is British.

The Dominion Parliament, at its last session, as our readers will remember, passed a copyright act which gave Canadian publishers the right to republish English copyright works on the payment to the author of a sum based on the selling value of the work. This act was intended to remedy the existing state of affairs which enables American editions of British works to enter Canada on payment of a small duty and deprives a dentification shall be evidenced by a cartificate in the English language by the government of which the immigrant is a subject. It will also contain the name and description of the person with his or her signature.
