Mr. Warren says that the hospitals are full of scurvy-stricken miners, and many deaths have occurred from the malady. Thousands of gold hunters are trying to get home. business."

Witness admitted selling a belt filled with brick dust to Ziebold, the insurance agent, and admitted also that he told him to wear also a gold belt.

When the afternoon session opened, Mr. Navin asked the defendant if he ever saw Maade, the druggist's clerk, who testified to the selling of arsenic to him. Assher replied that he did go to the drug store and bought ten cents' worth of arsenic.

"Why did you want arsenic?"
"I wanted it to kill the fleas on Mrs. Schulta's dog."
The cross-examination of Ascher was very sensational in parts and took nearly the entire afternoon. Mr. Frazer assumed his characteristic attitude before the witness and began as follows: Detro't, April 21 .- The trial of Spiritalist Lang, or Ascher, will conclude all probability here to-day. Counel are now addressing the jury. The msation of vesterday was the de-aron his face, the same old smile that has played about the features of the self denounced. The great wear of prison life and long days in court have not told upon him in many respects.

"In Denver. But I would not call them seances, they were really private readings."
"What is that graft?"
"Oh. you just answer the questions they ask."
"The questions just come in sealed envelopes, do they not?"
"Yes. I had to tear the envelope open and read the questions, and I would then slip the questions into another envelope and the skiter would not know that the envelope had been opened."
"You must have been all right to do all of that while the sitter was looking at you." hat he had before been tried for murder in Louisville, Ky. He smiled all the time. His sweetheart, sitting on the front row of seats, listened to every word of testimony as if her own life, were involved. An occasional glance of recognition from her lover on the stand would being a blush to her face. Mrs. Ascher, nother of the defendant, sat all of that while the sitter was looking at you."

On, that was easy. I would do it behind the slates that I held up."

And the 'sucker' would sit right in front of you all the time?"

"Say: you had quite a graft, didn't you?"

"Yes."

by Mr. Robinson and most of the time her face was bathed in tears.

TELLS OF NICHOLS.

Ascher told of his first acquaintance with Nichols, the murdered man. He said that he first met him in Murch of last yeer. At the time, he was advertising, or spiritualistic business under the name o. Harry Raeder. He explained the taking of the alias of "Robert Lang" as follows: "When I first started out, several years ago, I had to choose a name quick and the first name that came into my head was Robert Lang, the name of an old friend of mine in Detroit. I stuck to that name. I didn't mean anything wrong when I took the name, but took it because it was the first one that came to my mind."

Ascher went on to state that he first began to correspond with Nichols some time in March of last year, and that he afterward gave Nicho's sittings at $1 each. He wrote letters to Nichols telling him what time to come into town to see him. "How much money did you get out of Nichols?" asked Mr. Navin. "About $60 or $70."

"Did he always come to Detroit to have his sittings?"

"No, he would sit at home (Pittsfield) and I would sit in Destroit."

"Atout what time did you look for the sporits each evening?"

"It would generally be about eight o'clock."

"Yes."

HIS START AS A FAKIR.

Witness then went on to state that he started in the "faking" business as advance agent for Dr. A. H. Waite & Son, who operated a "fake" cabinet show. He declared that he did not steal a piano in St. Louis, as has been stated, but merely rented it and left it for the people in the house to return. He said that he bought slates for ten cents a pair and sold them for $3.

"Did you defraud Nichols?" "Yes."

"You knew that you were defrauding him and lying to him and then took his mone?"
