The crew saved their clothing, but the passengers nothing. Their quarters in the after part of the ship were under water. All had a narrow escape. Had the accident occurred in the night or in rough weather, everybody aboard would have been drowned. Boats were rowed about in the fog for a couple of hours in search of a landing place, but none could be obtained, the coast being rock-bound. Two passer gers, one an English naval officer, landed at the risk of their lives and scaled the cliffs, which were impassable for women, to convey tidings to the nearest habitation. The boats then started north towards St. Mary's. A fishing craft picked them up in the evening and brought them here. The steamer Grand Lake proceeded to St. Mary's for them and took them to Placentia, whence a train brought them here, where they are now comfortably housed. The Capulo had a cargo of seals and 5000 cases of lobsters for Liverpool. All the ship's papers were lost.

A later dispatch says: Little hope exists of saving the wrecked steamer and she is going to pieces rapidly. Hundreds of men are trying to save the cargo of tinned lobsters aboard, which is valued at $55,000. No more mail has been re-

On Wednesday morning the Albatross sailed from Seattle for Behring sea with a distinguished party of scientists, who will visit the seal rookeries of Alaska and the adjacent islands in the interests of the United States and British and Canadian governments. The party includes Prof. David Starr Jordan of the Stanford university, who represents the United States; Pref. d'Arcy Thompson, representing Great Britain: Prof. James Macoun, representing the Canadian government and several other noted scientists. They will study the habits of the seal, the interesting animal which for years has furnished an excuse for the gathering of expensive commissions and the assembling of American revenue cutters and British men-of-war in Beh-

Four terrible storms were experienced; twice the vessel was ashore on a sand spit and an equal number of times she was dangerously near rocks, but she ran the gauntlet safely and landed the venturesome argonauts in the land of gold. Terrific nor'westers marked the passage and twice the passengers prepared to be drowned like cats in a cage. However, the superior sea-manship of the captain brought all out safely. The rigging was in poor condition and immense water tanks on her deck containing water for a number of horses she had on board, made the craft topheavy and almost unmanageable in the heavy seas. avocations which the modern dispensation condemns most of can extirpate from our blood the inherited longing to sit under the greenwood tree, to go a-Maying, and to watch with observant eye the ways of bird, and beast, and vegetation. The old pleasures, the old pastimes, those that fascinated Chaucer and his contemporaries, fascinate Englishmen still. The ideal heroine is a milkmaid, and their ideal hero Robin Hood. Novelists may write their town romances, and make their personages become enamored of each other in Mayfair or Putney. But a breath of fresh country air makes us all feel that we want the creatures of our imagination to abide in moated grange or in hamlet parsonages.
