

BROOKLYN Y.M.C.A.

Seventeen Hundred Persons
Hear F. B. Smith, Speak.And 164 Conversions are Reported as a Result of the Meeting

Held on Sunday.

(Brooklyn Eagle.)

Not before there have been so many men in the Orpheum Theatre as there were Sunday afternoon. There were 1,700 there by actual count. They gathered under the auspices of the Central Branch of the Young Men's Christian Association at a mass meeting for men addressed by Frederick B. Smith of Iowa on the subject, "What Makes a Strong Man?" As a result of the meeting there were 164 conversions reported. The collection amounted to $136. The theatre was packed from the orchestra to the topmost gallery seat, and long before the hours of commencing the services many were waiting in the rain for the doors to open.

Frederick B. Smith is a man of fine physique and with a clear cut face. He looks more like a business man than a public speaker, but quickly disabuses one of that idea. His voice was pitched rather high and felt the strain toward the last, but then he spoke for an hour and ten minutes without a note to aid him. He was readily followed by all and listened to with an attention that never seemed to flag. Hardly a person left the theatre until the services were entirely over. Mr. Smith's memory for apt texts of scripture was good and he used them frequently. He chose as a text for his address the words from Daniel: "The people that do know their God shall be strong." He spoke in substance as follows:

"Strong, looked upon as a Saxon word, has its genesis in the Bible. It is frequently used in its varied senses in the Bible. In considering we want to know when, where and what is the strong man of the Bible. It is not solely physical strength, for many who are physically strong are morally weak. Physical strength depends on purity of life. Cleanliness and power go hand in hand. Do not deprecate your body by the many vices that we know of. It is a good thing, but we cannot judge men by the standard of physical strength. A physical giant may be a moral coward. Many a weak man physically may triumph over him in this regard.

"Ability to make money is thought to be another proof of strength. Some say that means all, and give up all else to get the cold, glittering, battered gold. There is too much commercialism abroad. I believe in making it honestly and using it righteously. I am out of touch with the line of the hymn which says, 'For silver and gold.'"

"Every day, though, that you stay at an honest day's duty and save a portion of what you earn you are doing a righteous act. He who swaggers away his time in idleness will in time be blown away, and no one will know what has become of him. Money, though, is not the standard of strength. I know a man who made $7,500,000 out of swarthy laborers, who, when asked by a committee for money to aid in the intellectual and moral improvement of his fellow men, told the committee: 'If those men want to go to hell, let them go to hell. Now we are getting our labor for forty cents a day, and we will get it for less.'"

"When a Christian civilization will let such men live out of a penitentiary it is time something was done. On the other hand, I can tell of an old man who is the epitome of a Christian whose sixty-seven years of Christian life have been without reproach or comment. He is poor, having lost all he had in a worldly sense, but I had rather be than any one else.

"Education is one of the greatest elements of success. An intellectual man is a strong man. Neglect not this as you value your future in this life. I do not undervalue its worth for strength, but as has been said, 'Educated men without religion are clever devils.' As David said to Solomon, 'Keep the charge of the Lord thy God, if you would have strength. Forget all else, but remember God.' The first day of your real strength will come when you say that you will live for God. Take care of the other things, for they are worth something, but God will take the place of all else when the moment of trial comes."

The speaker held a dialogue with two imaginary men on the platform, one a Christian and the other a self-confessed infidel, in which he claimed that infidelity was an excuse for lawlessness. He drew a picture of two young men of his acquaintance, one of whom had the strength to take the right resolve, but the other was weak and did not, with the result that the first one reached a position of trust without sacrificing his Christianity, but the other went to a drunkard's end.

Then while the Park sisters played Just As I Am, Without One Plea, he called upon those needing prayer to rise. About one-quarter of the audience rose, and prayer was offered for them by the Rev. Dr. David Gregg. Many of the young men in the audience were deeply affected.

SOME RARE COINS.

Phillips Exeter Academy Receives Rich Gift.

EXETER, N. H., Jan. 8.—Phillips Exeter academy has received through Prof. Seymour of Yale more than 100 ancient Greek coins, the gift of Henry K. Wingate, principal of a boys' school at Talas, Cæsarea, Turkey.

The collection numbers 113 pieces in silver, copper and bronze, many of great rarity and value, and in dates ranging from 500 B. C. to 200 A. D. Several of the coins commemorate Alexander the Great.

Phillips church of this town regularly maintains one or more boys at the school where Mr. Wingate is principal. Mr. Wingate visited Exeter last fall and while here met Principal Amen of the academy. The latter at that time expressed a desire to have a collection of ancient coins for the academy, and it is to gratify this desire as far as possible that Mr. Wingate has made this gift.

Prof. Seymour said in a letter accompanying the coins that Yale would have gladly received them, and expressed curiosity as to what institution had secured them for the academy.

TRAVELLING LIBRARIES.

(Toronto World.)

The education department this month, finds a greater demand for travelling libraries and for assistance for rural schools. A catalogue of recommended books for the rural libraries was sent, and many applications for the percentage were received. The Hon. Mr. Harcourt's aim is to have a library in every school room in the province. They are beginning to realize that the four or five hours daily at school is a small thing in a child's life. The problem facing educators is to prolong the school life, and make the work go on after school years. This is the only way to get the best type of manhood.

THE $5,000,000 DUBAR.

(Toronto Globe.)

The dubar, it is said, will cost $5,000,000. Three million seven hundred and fifty thousand dollars of this sum is extracted from the people who a short time ago the world was endeavoring, and vainly, to preserve from the worst horrors of famine. A more joyous dubar would have been a five million remission of taxes.

WELL POSTED IN SCRIPTURE.

An old gentleman of pronounced religious views, a friend of our family in Scotland, wished to have out over the door of a new house the text, "My house shall be called a church of prayer." "But ye have made it a den of thieves," was the explanation.

DEEP SEA MISSION.

About Which Dr. Grenfell Will Speak This Evening.

A lecture will be given in St. John's (St. John's) church school-house this evening by Dr. W. T. Grenfell, the Labrador Deep Sea Medical Mission for Fishermen. The lecture will be illustrated by limelight views, and promises to be most interesting. A collection will be taken on behalf of his work. The society in whose behalf Dr. Grenfell is lecturing is the Royal National Mission to Deep Sea Fishermen, which has its headquarters in London, England.

The Labrador Mission costs about $20,000 per year. There is a steamer, the Strathcona, presented by Lord Strathcona, with complete medical equipment, including the X-ray, and there are three shore hospitals, and 200 miles apart. Besides the Strathcona there are three launches. Four doctors are employed. In addition to the hospital work done, missionary services are held on the Strathcona and on shore. From the middle of November until early spring the Strathcona is frozen in some one of the harbors.

The work done is a branch of that of the British mission, which has three large steamers on the British coasts doing similar work.

Dr. Grenfell, who is a young and athletic man, is a clear speaker, and tells a story of surpassing interest, illustrated by splendid views of the bleak region where he buries himself for the good of the lonely fishermen.
