THE NEW CLUB FOR MEN OPENS TOMORROW NIGHT

A Splendid Programme Has Been Prepared For the First Night.

The new club for men will be opened in the mission hall, Waterloo street, tomorrow evening. Energetic work on the part of the committee during the past few weeks has perfected the arrangements and everything is now in readiness for the start. The hall has received a lot of attention, the heating, has been properly fixed up, the decorating renewed, and in fact the whole place made most attractive and comfortable. For the opening meeting an unusually fine programme, which will be announced tomorrow, has been prepared. Among those who will take part are some of the best musicians, singers and readers in the city, all being of the male persuasion. An entertainment will be provided not only for the opening but on each evening of the week, and judging from the widespread interest which is manifested in the club, the attendance should tax the capacity of the hall. Every man, young or old, will be heartily welcomed. All who attend will find enjoyment and, more than this, will receive some benefit. The aim is to help men to be men, and along this line every effort will be put forth.

LOCAL NEWS.

Michael Comerfort, who was stabbed in three places last night by a shipmate in John Ribb's barroom, on Mill street, presented a miserable appearance this morning. When it became time to bring the prisoners into the police court it was found that the unfortunate fellow was so sore and weak that he could only move with great pain and difficulty. Police Sergeant Campbell found it necessary to pick the injured man up and carry him from the cell to the court room.

The poor fellow looked wretched and groaned with pain as he was given a seat on the prisoners bench. He was also apparently suffering from the effects of liquor for he could hardly open his eyes, and he trembled from head to foot.

Peter Sutton and Felix McCormish were held as witnesses, and Francis Moore was charged with doing the stabbing. All of the men concerned are of the C. P. R. steamer Empress of Britain. When Moore was asked what he had to say to the charge, he said he didn't do the job, "willfully." He was only skyarking at the time and would plead not guilty. He did not look on his offense as a serious one and laughed during the proceedings.

Comerfort had to be assisted to the witness box, and in answer to the magistrate he said he hailed from Liverpool. When he came ashore last evening he met Moore, McCormish and Sutton, and they visited three public houses. At the last public house Moore had an open knife in his hand and he dug the blade into his thigh and back three times. He said there had been no hard words.

Peter Sutton, a trimmer on board the Empress, proved a most unwilling witness when called on, and got himself in trouble by his evasive answering of questions. He said he was with the other three men, and the injuries were treated. He then left the bar and went to the other end of the bar and had a pint of beer alone. The examination of the knife showed that it was that Pub, was as good as down the street farther. He did not see any trouble or any other man stabbed and would swear to it. After being cross-questioned by the magistrate the witness said he saw a crowd around a man who was lying on the floor, and water was being given to him. He did not know who the man on the floor was, as he didn't notice, because it was none of his business. The magistrate told the witness that he must hold nothing back. The witness swore that what he had told was all he knew of the affair.

Sergeant Campbell informed the court that Policeman Crawford said that Sutton last night told all about the stabbing.

The magistrate ordered that Sutton be detained. Other witnesses would be called, and if there was enough evidence to convict the man of perjury he wouldn't go home in the ship this voyage.

Felix McCormish, another of the party who had been held as a witness, testified that there had been no fight and he did not see any stabbing. He saw Comerfort lying on the bar room floor and the bar tender throwing water on him. This brought him to, and the bar tender then told him to get out and go to his ship.

McCormish was allowed to go, while Moore and Sutton were remanded to jail. The latter may probably be charged with perjury.

Comerfort was ordered to be taken to the hospital in the ambulance after Dr. D. E. Berryman had made another examination of the wounds.

While in the guard room awaiting the arrival of the ambulance Comerfort said that while in court he did not want to be too hard on the prisoner, but that the four were together all the evening and the reason that Moore stabbed him with the knife was because he wouldn't treat again.

There is another sailor on the ship, named Patrick Kiland, who, it is said, said there was a fight before the stabbing took place. He will be summoned as a witness.

When arrested last night Moore informed the police that he stabbed Comerfort with the blade of a penknife and afterwards threw the blade away. As the ship sails on Friday next for Liverpool it is expected that the case will be resumed tomorrow or Thursday.

MAHONEY HAD THAT DARK BROWN TASTE

Michael Mahoney, who was arrested yesterday by Detective Cook of the C. P. R., in the charge of breaking into a case and stealing two bottles of gin, was brought into court this morning and consented to be tried by Magistrate Ritchie. He pleaded guilty and as an explanation said that he had been drinking the night before, and in the morning being run sick he stole the liquor and hid it away until he got an opportunity to drink it. He was remanded to jail for sentence.
