LETTERS TO THE EDITOR.

Reply to W. C. Ar derson. to the Editor of The Telegraph:

of breakwater at Waterside, Affect Control Now, sir, he states of the first charge about the rotten timber, "It was an utter impossibility for me to procure the timber elsewhere that season of the year at any price and had I not used this timber the work would have had to be abandoned." Who made it impossible to procure timber at that season of the year? Was 1: W. C. Anderson? Did Mr. Martin say to you he could cut long timber and "It was a short job for him to saw to into two pieces? Then did you not tell Mr. Martin say to you he could cut long timber and "It was a short job for him to saw to into two pieces? Then did you not tell Mr. Martin say to you he could cut long timber and "It was a short job for him to saw to into two pieces? Then did you not tell Mr. Martin you already had the short timber? At this time had you in mind your own timber? Do you know what Mr. Martin will state on out the woods that it was brought out and used in the said breakwater?

In reference to the wood, W. C. Anderson refers to in his letter sawed by two boys one afternoon, it is a small item, but even so, I fear he has been dilitory about making returns after shipment and it has nothing to do with the charge made in my letter.

The charges about cutting timber belouging to the government I referred to wer as follows: A heavy storm about 25th of December, 1901, carrier away about eighty feet of the break on the breakwater which was most all good sound timber boited to gether, that I am informed on good authority that W. C. Anderson hired two men to the department of public works for payment of said work, and at that time went to the department of public works for payment of said work, and at that time went to the department of public works for payment of said work, and at that time went to the department of public works for payment of said work, and at that time went to the department of your schooner Alba in the spring of 1902? Methe break was worth cutting up to save the iron what became of the iron? Was not part of it shipped t

John and sold as old junk in the summer of 1902?

In my letter about the charge of conductor being away considerable of the time looking after his own business he says in reply that I said "A large part of the time," which, if he will read it carefully, he will see I did not say a large part of the time. I still charge that he was away five mile from the work looking after his own business while the work was going on and more than once at that in one week.

The minister of public works, the public or any man of common sense knows that anything I may write in The Telegraph doe not prove the charges against W. C. An derson and it certainly follows that his emphatic denials do not prove that the charge are not true and if they are not true W. C Anderson need not fear the light of day an I challenge W. C. Anderson to ask the min ister of public works to have a full, investigation held at Waterside and have the me that have been employed on the work te their story under oath and see what the will swear to.

Sir, ask for an investigation over your own ame in The Telegraph. If you don't dis the minister of public works must judy you guilty. If you ask for an investigation is sufficient.

I can state that the Liberals will ask for some good strong Liberal to investigate this business.

Mr. Anderson speaks in his letter of one of the soreheads and again he states that there is only three in this great party whose aim is to injure him purely on account of personal feelings. Now, Mr. Editor, that is not so. I know better than that. He can multiply his three Liberals quite a number of times to get them all who are complaining about the way this work has been carried on and money wasted.

Any one would think by reading his letter that there was two or three that wanted his job and was trying to get him out of it so one of them could get the appointment. It is nothing of the kind. They would just as soon W. C, Anderson would have it as anyone if he would attend to it as he ought to and carry on the work as any man should that is employed by the government. But while people have eyes they can see and will see, and when they see things going wrong they will talk about it and no honest man can blame them for so doing.

If W. C. Anderson does not at once ask in The Telegraph over his own name for an investigation the time has arrived when the Liberal party of the parish of Harvey must take action under the proper course to have the minister of public works order an investigation. They, the committee, are responsible for the Liberal interest of the parish and for the credit of the Liberals I demand that they have the charges investigated. Thanking you, Mr. Editor, for your valuable space, I remain.

Yours respectfully.

M. C. ANDERSON.
