Leard's Canned Chicken - Write W. A. LEARD, Summerside, P. E. I. We wish to have some party handle our goods.

ANCIENT PASTRY MOULDS - They Stamp Elaborate Pictures on Cakes and Buns. If the gingerbread Elizabethan times were going out of fashion in the seventeenth century the bun and the bun were appearing in a quaint and ornamental fancy, says the Queen. Kingly edifices and royal features were vigorously and not always flatteringly impressed upon the small discs of paste which were baked in the windows of the fashionable bun houses.

Of interest to Women - A drop of kerosene on the hinge of a door will stop its squeaking. Never let a comb soak in order to clean it. Use a stiff nail brush. Oxalic acid and javelle water are excellent for removing ink stains.

By whom he had John, born at Hopkinton (Mass.) March 6, 1783, dying on Oct. 12, 1838.

John, just mentioned, the father of the prophet, was a soldier in the revolutionary war, doubtless on the rebel side, as he appears to have married at Hopkinton, he enlisted at the early age of sixteen, and after the close of the war married on Oct. 31, 1789, Nabby Howe, daughter of Phineas Howe, of Hopkinton. By her he was the father of Brigham Young, who was born at Whittington, Vermont, Jan. 1, 1801, dying at Salt Lake City Aug. 29, 1877.

This would appear to effectually annul the contention that Brigham Young was of either New Brunswick or Nova Scotia Loyalist descent, and it is hoped that with this paper the matter, in so far as New Brunswick Loyalist history is concerned, may be considered as having been finally disposed of.

DAVID RUSSELL JACK.

Not What It is Cracked Up to Be, College Students Find Some of the Young Adventure Seekers Have Been Reduced to Mendicancy Abroad.

Fifty years ago if the wanderlust got into an American youth's blood he tied his belongings in a handkerchief, slid down the water spout in the dark of the moon, and man away for the nearest port. There he shipped before the mast for two, three or four years and then, if he wasn't shipwrecked, marooned, eaten by cannibals, knifed in a mutiny, or killed by pirates, he came home with either a fortune or service for good or else returned home with the travel virus of his system or at least safely isolated.

Today the thing is easier—at least, some folks think it is. The young man takes a berth on a cattle ship bound to Europe, does the filthy work of deckhand and stable man for twelve to fourteen days, gets a return ticket in payment for his labor, and then, if his money belt hasn't been appropriated by some of his undesirable associates, he tramps about in foreign parts until his money is spent. If he has been separated from his slender funds, as not infrequently happens, he either wisely returns to America on the next steamer, or else goes ashore to beg for service for good or else returned home with the travel virus of his system or at least safely isolated.

For the present the only conclusion which we are justified in making is in the words of the favorite Scotch verdict, "Not proven," and we must trust to some later discovery of more conclusive evidence to either confirm or entirely annul this interesting story.

The paper submitted at our April meeting was followed by another short paper at the May meeting, of which the following brief synopsis appears in the Daily Telegraph of May 3, 1911.

The historian, D. R. Jack, read a brief paper in continuation of that submitted at the previous meeting, in which he had questioned the correctness of certain assertions that the late Brigham Young was the descendant of a New Brunswick Loyalist. He pointed out that his attention had been invited by Judge Haydon of Annapolis Royal, to a section of the history of Annapolis county, compiled by the late W. A. Calne and himself, where on page 128 of that work it was distinctly claimed that the late Brigham Young was a Loyalist who had settled in Nova Scotia in the year 1764, and was really the progenitor of Brigham Young. Judge Savary had informed the late William Young, who confirmed an existence by selling postcards or doing menial tasks abroad until they can save up enough money to enable them to return to Annapolis Royal, and to Uncle Sam and Alms Master. He reports that there are many such in London, Paris, Rotterdam, Antwerp and in cities along the Rhine.

INTERESTING PAPER BY D. R. JACK - Read at Meeting of the New Brunswick Historical Society Last Night - Brigham Young Not of Loyalist Descent.

The monthly meeting of the Loyalist Society was held last evening, J. S. Hagler, president, in the chair. H. O. Crookshank was elected a member.

The matter of having copies made for the Archives Department, Ottawa, of the Loyalist records in London, was allowed to lie over until the next monthly meeting pending the appointment of the new minister of agriculture, to whom the department the matter would fall.

The matter of the preparation of a paper by the historian, to be read in the public schools on May 18 next, was allowed to stand over, the members being requested to suggest suitable subjects for such a paper at the next meeting.

M. JACK'S PAPER. The historian, D. R. Jack, read the following paper called Brigham Young, Not of Loyalist Descent. It will be remembered that at the regular meeting of this society held in April last, the writer read a short paper upon the question: "Brigham Young, Empire Loyalist."

The statement contained in the foregoing paragraph, it was pointed out, is entirely erroneous, as evidenced from the records of the Glasgow kept by Rev. Richard Clark and other records that parallel. No such name as that of Brigham Young appears therein at any date.

There was much other internal evidence to condemn Dr. Wiggins' conclusions, all of which is fully set forth in the paper as published in The St. John Telegraph of April 9 last, and which concluded in the following words:

For the present the only conclusion which we are justified in making is in the words of the favorite Scotch verdict, "Not proven," and we must trust to some later discovery of more conclusive evidence to either confirm or entirely annul this interesting story.

DEATH LIST - The following cases of contagious diseases were reported as occurring in the city during September: Diphtheria 9, scarlet fever 6, typhoid fever 27, and tuberculosis 2.

The increase in typhoid fever was partly to be expected because of the very warm and comparatively dry summer. These conditions foster the growth and distribution of the bacillus, and incidentally, unfortunately, have been infected the previous season. Quite three-fourths of these cases are in sections of the city where pollution of the soil by the waste of the favorite Scotch verdict, "Not proven," and we must trust to some later discovery of more conclusive evidence to either confirm or entirely annul this interesting story.
