amination of St. George Mivart's "Genesis of Species;"

reprinted from the North American Review, with Additions, Lon., 1871, 8vo. 2. Philosophical Discussions: with a Biographical Sketch of the Author by Charles Eliot Norton, York, 1877, 8vo.

"The reader who makes his own the vast amount of thought concentrated in the four hundred and odd pages of these discussions is not likely to dispute the truth of Mr. Norton's estimate, that they are the most important contribution made in America to the discussion and Investigation of the questions which now chiefly engage the attention of the students of philosophy." There are four largest essays in the volume on the Darwinian theory, and the philosophical reviews of Spencer, Mansell, Lewes, Mill, and others.—Nation, xxiv, 234.
