Audience At The Grand Were Enthralled By Martin Harvey

When Brantfordites have the pleasure of hearing, as well as witnessing an English actor of eminence, one who is considered in certain roles the natural successor to the late Sir Henry Irving, there should be cause for elation, as the opportunity is regarded as one which belongs to the big metropolitan centres. Martin Harvey came here last night at the Grand Opera House, and with an excellent cast presented "The Only Way," the well known dramatization of Dickens' "Tale of Two Cities." Whether Martin Harvey has won the mantle of Irving or not, he is undoubtedly among the first rank of English actors with Forbes Robertson, Sir Beerholm Tree, Sir George Alexander and others. In the Dickens drama he is without a peer. An interpretation of the story by Harvey, as presented last night, can be appreciated almost without the lines. Few actors have the power to hold their audiences to such a degree, to enthrall them, as Harvey. In the Dickens play the appeal is strong. There are some who do not like the detail of gruesomeness which characterizes the work of the famous novel.

Miss Maude Rivers, as Lucy Manstons, and Mr. Harvey, in the role of the devoted servant, also captured their audience. In the guillotine scene and in the Bastille, which reflects all the horrors of the French Revolution, Harvey's presence and his interpretation was picturesque and romantic, and yet not beyond the possibility of concerning it as "The Only Way."

Manager Johnson is to be congratulated on securing such an excellent attraction as that of last night.

draw attention to them were first the salt conduct granted to corruptors; secondly, both the corrupt and corrupted were equally guilty and there was lack of equity in protecting the corrupters while the corrupted were unprotected, and thereby the bill being a false one, there could have been no corruption because the bill had no real existence. It was shown that before the question of money arose both Berard and Bergevin were in favor of the bill and had agreed to support it. Neither had asked for money at that time. In fact both refused when first offered it. Mr. Bergevin had taken $200 after a conversation with Mr. Biddinger about real estate during which the bill was not mentioned. Mr. Geoffroy said: "Place this thing on ordinary moral grounds. Supposing a man was sitting quietly at home and a scheme was organized to test his powers of resisting temptations. Suppose he was offered money and fell, what jury would convict him?"

Mr. Laflamme declared that he was glad he was pleading to a committee of the Upper House, and not to a partisan press or to the general public. He argued that if payment was made to two members of the Upper House to have them support a bill, which was detrimental to the public interest, it was necessarily a public bill, and if only private interests were involved, it would be a private bill. He asked what private interest could have been infringed upon in this case since the bill had no existence and was merely a phantom bill.

"We are here to defend two of our colleagues," he argued, "and also to protect the honor of his house. The men who laid the trap contended that the end justifies the means, set a trap to bribe and by so doing they committed a crime."

Mr. Laflamme referred to the statutes to show the articles that had violated, and said they had committed a crime for which they were liable to be sent to jail for 14 years.

Mr. Laflamme drew attention to Maloney's testimony that Mr. Bergevin was willing to support the bill without a cent and the detectives comment on this, "I believe he would have done this," Maloney also said.

The motive must be considered. Maloney's statement was that of a man who was following the dictates of his conscience.

After enjoying a sumptuous supper a chorus was very sweetly rendered by a group of little children. This was followed by reports from the following persons: Mr. Wilson, Treasurer of the Trustees Board; Mr. Fred Sumler, Steward of the Official Board; Mrs. Pierson, Treasurer of the Ladies' Aid; Mr. Clarence Graham, Secretary of the Sabbath School; Mrs. Chas. Wilson, President of the Ladies' Aid, and Miss Annie Hawley, President of the Epworth League. These reports were followed by the presentation of a handsome club bag and companion to Miss Libby Vanderlip, who leaves this week for Toronto, where she expects to remain for an indefinite period. The presentation was made by Mrs. Wilson and Mrs. Pierson read the following address:

Dear Miss Vanderlip—It is with much regret that we learn of your intended departure from among us. You have always been a staunch supporter of our church in every way, and your Christian character and influence has told for good, we believe, upon our community. We realize that as a faithful worker in all that stands for the promotion of what is best and good, your place will be hard to fill. We feel that we could not allow you to depart from your friends here without showing you in some tangible way that we have appreciated your services. As a slight token of our esteem will you kindly accept this companion and club bag. May the remainder of your life abound with happiness and may the God who rules the universe watch over us all and then, although distance may separate us, we shall all remain members of His great family, children of God's fold. Again wishing you God speed.

Signed on behalf of your friends of the Cainsville congregation: Rev. Mr. Morrow, pastor; Miss Annie Hawley, president of E. L.; Mrs. Wilson, president of Ladies' Aid; Mr. Fred Sumler, Superintendent of S. S.

Several others also took part, and after the singing of a hymn the meeting was closed with the Mizpah benediction.
