NERVOUSNESS.

Melancholy or despondency caused by west unneated herves, are responsible for more sickness and suffering than any other disease.

If you have a secret drain from early abuse, later excesses or exposure, the results are the same. You cannot expect healthy nerves while your vitality is being wasted. Do not eke out a miserable existence on account of your youthful follies, you are not safe until cured—nature never excuses—no matter how young, old or innocent one may have been. If you are tired in the morning, drowsy and sleepy, feel as if you are overworked, pain in the back, deposits in urine, irritable and easily excited, no ambition, memory poor, haggard expression, or other signs of weakness, call and see me, as I guarantee my Latest Method Treatment a positive cure for these conditions, and you pay when cured. When Victoria Was Crowneg.

In the Marquis of Lorne's "Life" of Queen Victoria there is a chapter on Queen Victoria there is a chapter on the coronation now quite interest-ing in view of the much-discussed ceremony which is to take place in London in June. The former Governor-General's description of the pageant is too impressionistic to be very effective, but the following ac-count of the ceremony given by Lady count of the ceremony, given by Lady Wilhelmina Stanhope, one of the train-bearers of the Queen, who later became the Duchess of Cleveland, is very amusing. She writes:

The Queen looked very well and was perfectly composed. She wore a circlet of splendid diamonds, and was dressed in gold tissue, over which was fastened a crimson velvet mantle, bor-dered with gold lace, and lined with ermine, with a long ermine cape, which very ponderous appendage we were to support. . . . We were all dressed alike, in white and silver. The effect was not, I think, brilliant enough in so dazzling an assembly, and our little trains were serious annoyances, for it was impossible to avoid treading upon them. We ought never to have had them; and there certainly should have been some previous rehearsing, for we carried the Queen's train very jerkily and badly, never keeping step proper-ly, and it must have been very difficult for her to walk, as she did, evenly and steadily, and with much grace and dig-tive. On Thursday it belched forth smoke, ashes, and flames. The town of St. Pierre was covered with ashes nity, the whole length of the Abbey. The Abbey itself was a beautiful coup d'oeil, as we marched up amid thunders of applause and handkerchiefs and scarfs waving everywhere. The Queen acknowledged her reception very graciously. I think her heart fluttered a little as we reached the throne; at least, the color mounted to A LUXURY FOR DYSPEPTIOS her cheeks, brow, and even neck, and her breath came quickly. However, the slight emotion she showed was very transient, and she stood perfectly motionless while the archbishop, in almost inaudible voice, proclaimed her our undoubted sovereign and liege lady. . . The burst of applause in the Abbey when the crown was placed on her head, and the sight of all the peers and peeresses crowning themselves at the same moment, was really most impressive, and in the midst of the cheering Handel's magnificent anthem, "The Queen Shall Rejoice!" thundered in. After this the Queen was enthroned, and we took up our station on the steps of the throne during the homage, and amused ourselves with watching Lord Surrey, the treasurer of the household, dispensing medals in the midst of a most desperate scramble, and nearly torn in pieces in the universal excitement. The pages were particularly active, and some of them collected ten or twelve medals apiece.

Breakfast Food is a true banisher of all digestive troubles. Dyspeptics I saw little of the homage. The Duke of Wellington was prodigiously cheered. Lord Rolle fell down, and was carried away by two strong peers. a month's trial; it will give them happy and lasting results. All grocers sell Malt Breakfest Food. . . . After the homage, we returned with the Queen to the chapel, where her mantle-now a purple one-was fastened on, and we waited for threequarters of an hour for the procession to form in the same manner as on entering the Abbey.

The Queen complained of a headache from having the crown very ceremoniously knocked by most of the but she said she had guarded herself from any accident or misadventure by having it made to fit her head tightly. had, besides, to bear the heavy orb and sceptre across the Abbey; but when she reached the robing-room, she disembarrassed herself of them, unclasped her mantle, took off her crown, and having got rid of all her royalty, sat down on the sofa and amused herself. We, too, were allowed to sit down

But her day of fatigue was not yet over, for she had to entertain one hundred persons at dinner in the palace. The Duke of Wellington had a great ball at Apsley House, two thousand persons having been invited, the cabinet ministers gave state dinners. luminations, fireworks, a fair in Hyde Park, and free admission to the thea-ters were provided for the gratification of Her Majesty's subjects in London. There was no accident of any importance, except in one case, where a balloon made a bad descent. The House of Commons voted $350,000 on account of the coronation, a very small sum when compared with the large amounts given for similar ceremonies abroad. A number of peers were created or raised a step in the peerage, among these being the father of General Lord Methuen, and twenty-nine baronets, among them Lytton Bulwer and William Herschell.

Mystifying the Audience.

At the first production of Augustus Thomas's dramatization of Richard Harding Davis's "Soldiers of Fortune," at New Haven, Robert Edeson, the star, made the first speech to the cheering Yale boys. Then there were calls for Richard Harding Davis, author of the novel, and Augustus Thomas, who had dramatized it. A large, smooth-Canada. Sheets of designs showing the various sizes, may be obtained from the Wells & Richardson Co., Limited, 200 Mountain St., Montreal, shaven man, who tallied with the descriptions of the novelist, appeared and thanked the students for their kind reception of his book in play form, said he hoped it would awaken new interest in the book, enlarging its sale, and that he would like to have Mr. Thomas dramatize his latest novel, "In the Fog," which name he impressed upon sible buyers. About a third of the audience knew that the man who had represented himself to them as Davis was really Mr. Thomas. The rest saw the joke when Mr. Davis came out and said: "Of course this reception is very gratifying, but I don't think my drama-tization of Mr. Davis's story is particularly good. But then, to a man who has written a play like 'Arizona,' that has been successful all over America, and recently was praised by the King and Queen of England, dramating a novel by a mere Richard Harding Da-vis seems unimportant and trivial."

The panic in the diamond market is growing worse instead of better. It is now almost impossible to get No. 2 whites in carload lots; No. 1 blues can be obtained only in bushel lots; and No. 1 straws are no longer quoted, except by the peck.—Chicago "Tribune."

The Sense of Humor,

He was an ordinarily mild and inof-fensive little gentleman who had lived for many happy, uneventful years in farther Chelsea, when a vol-ume of theatrical anecdotes came into his hands. In this he read of delicious practical jokes played with un-failing success by Vivier and Sothern, and of how that great comedian, J. L. Toole, brought confusion to a baker's shop displaying in the window a sign, "Families supplied," by requesting that three girls and a boy should be sent round as soon as possible.

at all nice? Supposing she makes it very nasty, what then?" No answer. The woman went on frying onlons, but her eye gleamed.
"What if I don't remember any mother? What if she never made anything at all? What if-" He got no further, but found himself thrust violently through the door to the pavement outside, while a voice admonished him: "Ere, you, don't come interfering 'ere-if yer wants a sausage and mashed, say so. If not, get out." And as he retreated hastily, though with dignity, the voice followed faintly: "Bedlam-that's the place for the likes of you-Bedlam."

The discomfited little gentleman had walked nearly a mile before his recovery was completed by a sign, hung over a boot shop, which caught his eye. "Wear Parkinson's Boots," ran the legend.

The little man fairly leaped into the "Why?" he asked, in mild enquiry. "Beg pardon, sir," said the assistant who had hurried forward to greet him.

"Why should I wear Parkinson's boots? "Because they are the best, sir. We use nothing but the best leather." "What's the matter with my own?"

The assistant glanced down. "Uppers want mending and heels leveling, sir. Do you a perfect boot for "But supposing Parkinson's don't fit

One of the sorrows of childhood is he slowness of some older people to take a hint. It is often quite a strain on good manners to be obliged to reinforce a suggestion that should have een adequate in itself.

A little girl, calling at a neighbor's house, sat near a plate containing some apple-parings. At last, unable to keep silence any longer, she said, "I smell apples." returned her hostess, "It's those parings.' "No'm," said the little girl, solemnly.

Is the Novel Dying?

Science and the stern reality of life are bound to destroy the novel. It is out of harmony with the scientific and materialistic spirit of the age. The more industrial and strenuous a nation is, the fewer novelists has she; only the backward, the passive, the vision ary peoples produce great novelists. The fable, the national tale, the folk-The fable, the national tale, the folk-song, have died. Why, not the novel? It, too, is subject to the law of evolu-tion. Heldelberg Castle. Heidelberg castle, the beautiful old ruin on the Neckar so beloved by the American tourist in Europe, is to be reconstructed. German architects are anxious that it should not be kept up merely as a ruin, but that it be en-tirely rebuilt. It is considered far too valuable a relic of renaissance architec ture to act as an additional attraction to a landscape. The Grand Duke of Hesse and Baden and the kaiser are to be asked to support the project, which is to cost about 5,000,000 marks. Germans are delighted at the proposed change, but it is believed that foreign ers will be sadly disappointed. Heidelberg castle has always been such an admirable place to write letters from. At any rate, the proposition to recon-struct the castle shows the length to which Germans are going in the matter
