How They Are Made and What They Are Made Of

The other day the Treasury Department issued a circular proposing to ship free of express charges to persons desiring them nickels and pennies in certain quantities on receipt of their face value. The offer suggested some inquiries in regard to the cost of these coms and how it happens that the Government can ship them at par value and pay express charges upon them.

The story of the nickel is an interesting pay express charges upon them.

The story of the nickel is an interesting one, says the New York Btar. Very few people in this country imagine how much profit Unels Bam makes out of the stamping of these small coins. The actual cost of a nickel to the Government is not much more than three-quarters of a cent. Formerly the metal was fixed, planned and pre-pared for use in the National work-shops at the various mints, but now the metal is preclased ind prepared by outsiders under

The coinage of silver pieces is done main any thing else that the mint does. Under the present law the Treasury is required to buy and coin at least $2,000,000 worth of silver into dollars. This $2,000,000 worth of silver makes nearly $2,200,000, so that the profit on the monthly purchase and coin age of silver dollars is fully $7,000. So the profit on the silver dollars, you see, is in turn are run through immense rolers and flattened out to the thickness of the U soois. These silver strips are then presend through a machine which cuts them into the process its for the process the strips first having been treated which a kind of tallow to prevent their being scratched in their passage through the outton. The silver pieces are then put into the cell of the printing presses, and are fod to the die by automatic machinery. As the smooth pieces are pressed between the ponderous printing dies they receive the lettered and figured impression in a manner similar to that of paper pressed upon a form of type; at the same time the piece is expanded in a slight degree and the small corrugations are cut into its rim. The machine drops the completed coin into a receiver and it is ready for the counter's hand.

The instrument used by the counter is not a completed coin into a receiver and it is ready for the counter's hand.

The instrument used by the counter is not a somplicated machine by any means, as one might suppose. It is a simple copper-covered tray, having raised ridges running across its surface at a distance apart the money is duaped on to this board or tray, and as it is shaden rapidly by the counter, the pieces settle down into the spaces between the ridges. All these spaces being filled, the surplus is brushed back into the receiver, and the counter has exactly i,257 dimes, $125, on this tray, which number is required to fill the spaces. The tray is then emptied into boxes, and the money is required to fill the spaces.

The dinne does not pass through the weigher's hands, as does the coin of a larger denomination. One and one half grains is allowed for variation or "tolorance" in allowed for variation or "tolorance" in the termination from the standard in the tencent pieces is so trifling that the trouble of weighing coins of this denomination is dispensed with.

Nearly Two Thousand Red Men Swain Lowed Up in Alabama.

"Unclo" D. W. Hughes, a well preserved and intelligent octogenarian of this county, who has spentalizy four years of his ilite in this limindiate section, recently visited the Anniston (Aia). Times office and told many reminiscences of his younger days. His father was given by the Indiana what is sow known as the John Floyd Smith place, east of Oxford, and which is now the finest farm in Calnoun County. He soon afterward considered it too large for his purposes, and sold it off for ten head of cows and calves. Mr. Hughes says that the Indians that lived here were the very personification of honesty, and they regarded truthfulness as one of the greatest of all virtues. When a man knowingly told falsehood he was perpetually taunted with it, two thagers apread out to the shape of a V were held up before him on avery occasion, which meant "forked tongue," He related a story of Indian tradition which was very interesting. In a village a noise and a half below the present site of Oxford two squaws gave birth to twins and leaded a story of Indian tradition which was very interesting. way. This is not tradition, but facts.

The old gentleman his in his possession a quaint old Spanish coin, about the size of our silver dollars, coined in 960. It was given him by his grandfather at his birth, and it has never left his possession. The coin is now worth upward of 6500.

The old gentleman says this is a fast and unfriendly age. When he used to go to muster in St. Clair County to the long age his shoulder would be almost dislocated from shaking hands. "Now," said he, But few people deign to speak, and but soldon is it that your hand is grasped with the fervency of friendship. Alas, times have fervency of friendship. Alas, times changed," said he, "but there will reckoning by and by."

casionally, and then the coins are sent to the mint, cleaned up and sent into circulation again.

It is about the same story in references to pennies. The Government buys the metal out of which they are made ready for use and pays so much a pound for it, when it is cut and prepared for stamping. Then the mint puts the legal mark upon the coins and they are turned out by the million. What do they cost! Well, every cent that is coined brings in a profit of three-quarters of a cent to the Government. More pennies than nickels are returned to the Treasury in exchange for other money, but they are sent promptly to the mint, and soon get into the hands of the public once apain. A bronze penny or a raiself leve cent piece does not wear out as rapidly as a dollar bill.

But there is still another source of profit to the Government in the issuing of these small coins. One of the most expert of men at the Bub-Treasury in Wall street declared a day or two since that there are still in existence some where, floating about the country, bunched up in old stockings or in the hands of curlosity collectors, over 190,695,000 of the old-fashioned copper cents, about 29,000,000 of nicked 2-cent pieces. The botal value of these out standing minor coins is, put in round numbers, $100,000,000 of the contemplating the house the bell rang. "This was how it happened: I was looking for squirrels, and had shot several in a narrow ravine which I was following up. I had got near the head of the gully when a squirrel ran up a tree on the bank to my right. Before I could get a shot at him he had disappeared, leaping into another tree. The banks of the ravine were eight or ten. right. Reford I could get a shot at him he had disappeared, leaping into another tree. The banks of the ravine were eight or ten feet high at this point. I thought I would climb up and see if I could add that squirred to the contents of my game bag. By the aid of a supling growing half way up the bank I drew myself up with one hand, holding my gun with the other. Just as I placed my hand on top of a rolk and was about to spring out I saw the squirred. I was hesitating whether I should try to shoot him where I shoot, when I chanced to book where my hand was resting. "Jerusalent within two feet, coiled all to

But I must either climb upon go down, as my position was decliedly uncomfortable. When I realized the necessity for action I draw my gun up to my shoulder as cautionsly as I could, first, and shot the snake. The squirrel, of course, disappeared, and I concluded Pd better get down where the earth was more solid. I looked down to the base of the cliff, and I'lj he blessed if there wasn't another rattler stretched out right where I would jump on him.
