Selected Literature.

From Harper's Bazar.
Harry Heathcote of Gangoli.

BY ANTHONY TROLLOPE.

'It's out of the question,' he said.—
The very firmness, however, with which he spoke gave a certain cordiality even to his refusal. 'I must be at home, so that the men may know where to find me till I go out for the night.' Then, after a pause, he continued, 'As we can't go to you, why should you not come to us?'

So it was at last decided, much to Harry's own astonishment, much to his wife's delight. Kate, therefore, when she lay awake, thinking of the one word that had been spoken, knew that there would be an opportunity for another word.

Medlicot drove his mother home safely, and, after that he had taken her into the house, encountered Nokes on his return from Boalabong, as has been told at the close of the last chapter.

On the Monday morning Harry came home as usual, and, as usual, went to bed after breakfast. 'I wouldn't care about the heat if it were not for the wind,' he said to his wife as he threw himself down.

'The wind carries it so, I suppose.'
'Yes, and it comes from just the wrong side—from the Northwest.— There has been half a dozen fires about to-day.'

'During the night, you mean.'
'No; yesterday—Sunday. I can not make out whether they come by themselves. They certainly are not made by incendiaries.'

'Accidents, perhaps.'
'Well, yes. Somebody drops a match, and
