CLEWS' REVIEW.

New York, Dec. 31.—The United States has given another striking demonstration of its extraordinary recuperative powers. A year ago we were in the very abyes of depression, suffering from the memorable October panic. Busifrom the memorable October panic. Business had contracted fully 25 per cent.and more in volume, and securities had suffered a depreciation of over $350,000,000. To-day business is gradually approaching normal conditions, while securities have not only recovered all previous loss, but in many cases are selling above the boom prices of 1906-07. Such an emphatic and widespread recovery is beyond all, precedent, but before regarding its permanence with either too much skepticism or too much confidence it would be prudent to consider the causes of such prompt recovery.

DUN'S REVIEW.

Seasonable quiet is reported in wholesale and jobbing trade, traveling salesmen preparing to start out next week.
Confidence in good spring business is general, results of inventories thus far available, indicating that reports of depleted stocks were not exaggerated.
Conservative buying during the past year has made the statistical position very strong among dealers, while curtailed manufacturing operations prevented accumulation at the mills. These factors tend to sustain the level of prices. Retail trade in holiday specialties was of good volume in most sections, although at a few cities considerable stock will be carried over. Current distribution of staples is fair, but open

The same influence operates on the other hand to facilitate operaces on the other hand to facilitate outdoor work, and estimating rooms are After some overhauling and repairs the busy on plans for future construction, leading industried plants will resume next week with larger forces than at any time during 1908.

While some of the selling of steel on While some of the selling of steel on Saturday appeared strong, the buying elsewhere was very good. Keene brokers taking N. Y. C. Frick brokers buying Burlington and Pump, and there was good absorption of S. P. The strength of the Southern Railway is due partly to the fact that the earnings are showing excellently well. Bank statement was about as forecasted. There are plenty of conservatives, but until the supply of stocks is increased from inside quarters the bear conditions cannot make much headway. The U. P., S. ENGLISH DIVORCE LAWS.

British Writer Thinks That They Are Not Enlightened.

Not Enlightened.

It is an interesting coincidence that at the same time that people in this country are discussing with troubled surprise the increasing frequency of divorce a leading English magazine prints a protest against British restraints of the practice. In this article, published in the Westminster Review, the writer dwells on what he calls the absurdities of English law.

of English law.
"In modern England," he says, "the

of English law.
"In modern England," he says, "the State is at present actively promoting in every Poince Court the separation of husband and wife without the possibility of remarriage, and it legalizes and enforces voluntary separations, both public and private, in every class of life.
"In modern Germany the separation without remarriage of husband and wife is not recognized by the State except in the case of Roman Catholics, and even then a separation is subsequently convertible into a divorce at the option of either party. The remedy of the injured spouse is divorce or nothing. The remedy of separation, whether voluntary or compulsory, is rightly condemned as being contrary to public policy.
"In England a male is deemed capable of marriage at 14 and a female at 12, and although parental consent is commonly demanded of persons under 21 any fraudulent statement of its having been obtained does not invalidate the ceremony. In Germany a male cannot marry under 21 and a female under 18, whether parental consent is available or not.
"In England a man may, and not in-not.

"In England a man may, and not infrequently does, cut his wife and family out of his will. In Germany the rights of wife and children are properly safeguarded by limiting this liberty of disposition. "In England a father need not do more for his children than keep them out of the workhouse unless he has brought himself under divorce jurisdiction. In Germany he is obliged to maintain them in a suitable manner. In England a spendthrift or dipsomaniae can only be controlled when he has spent all his money. In Germany such persons are protected from themselves by the family council.

by the family council.

"In England an illegitimate child can never be legitimized by the subsequent marriage of the parents, though it may rank as a dependent under the workcompensation acts. In German this humane and reasonable opportunity of making reparation to the child exists as a matter of course. To provide for the illegitimate children of em ployees who earn less than £250 a year ployees who earn less than act the expense of the employer seem quite reasonable to the British public In our traditional groove of coarse unreflecting sentimentality we will money to the poor and deny then tagstatis standing in a row on the uppermost ramparts and broke out into five flags.

The morning breeze caught up their folds and held them straight out as though for our benefit, so that we could make them out quite plainly. Four of them were old friends that I had encounteed on all of the seven seas—the Union Jack and the Tricolor and the St. nAdrew's cross of Russia, and the red, white and green banner of Italy—but the fifth flag, which flew somewhat higher than the others, was of unfamiliar design; the single blood red square, however, bounded by the Greek cross and bearing the gleaning star of Bethlehem, told its own story and I knew it for the flag of Crete.

I knew that there was deep significance in the design of that unknown nce in the design of that un cance in the design of that unknown flag and the position of the four familiar ones that flew below it, for they signalled to all the world that the Turk had been driven out, never to return; that Christianity had triumphed over Mohammedism and that the cross had indeed medism and that the cross had indeed replaced the crescent; that the centuries of massacre were now but memories; that peace in the guise of foreign soldiery had for a time at lease found an abiding place in Crete, and most significant of all, that the strange flag with the single star would be uphel diff necessary by the mightiest array of bayonets and battleships in all Christendom.

Canea, which is the seat of government, is the most picturesquely cosmopolitan spot west of Suez. It is equidistant from the shoes of Europe, Asia and Africa, it has a mild and equable climate, living is cheap, there is a large garrison of foreign soldiery, there are no extradition treaties in force and trouble of one kind and another is always brewing.

Like a magnet therefore Canea has ways brewing.

Like a magnet, therefore, Canea has attracted the seum and offscouring of all the Levant—needy soldiers of fortune, professional revolution makers, smooth spoken gamblers and confidence on the case with the case of the case with the following selection on the firm on one knows where all that rabble of the needy, the adventurous and the desperate which follow the armies of occupation and are always to be found on the fringe of civilization.
