UNPLEASANT SUPERSTITION.

Woman of the English Fen Country

Boycotted as a Witch. We constantly hear it said that "this is the twentieth century super-stition and all that sort of thing died out long ago." Yet there is hardly a person in the country without his pet belief—that misfortune follows stooping over a baby or spilling salt, for that a black cat brings good luck, for example. Hence, too, the universal practice of wearing mascots "for luck"

These, however, are not very serious beliefs, being merely personal fads. Superstition of a deeper rooted and more unpleasant type is still common in the more backward rucommon in the more backward ru-ral areas, however. Only a few weeks ago an old dame in the Fen country was boycotted by the whole country-side because she had the reputation of being a witch and of throwing spells over people's children, stock spens over people's children, stock and crops. No one would go near her or let her have food or clothing, and she nearly starved to death.

The cold, legal atmosphere of the courts would be thought unfavorable to belief in with 1800.

to belief in withcraft, and yet a farmer-by no means an ignorant man-

Years ago any old crone who was cross grained with the neighbors stood a good chance of being tried (and burnt) for witchcraft, and cases are even known where animals were solemnly brought into court and tried on a similar charge. A tough old cock at Basle, in Switzerland, was accused of laying eggsa most serious offence, as such eggs a most serious offence, as such eggs were used only for making witches' ointment. The unhappy bird was haled before the justice, and one of the eggs produced as proof of guilt. In the face of such evidence the rooster's case was hopeless. He was con-victed and he and his miraculous eggs solemnly burnt at the stake in the town square.

A sow and six young pigs were accused of witchcraft towards a child, and were brought, protesting loudly, before the "beak." Amid great sensation, the sow was found guilty and publicly executed, but the porkers were acquitted on the ground of extreme youth. As late as 1740, a cow was accused of possessing a "devil," and, after a long hearing, was found guilty and condemned to death. "Rats and mice and such small deer" have been summoned on numerous occasions, but almost industrial in the sum of the s cused of witchcraft towards a child, numerous occasions, but almost in- day the guest of Miss Minnie Wea variably failed to put in an appearance at court.

In the fifteenth century, the peasants of a village in the south of France took legal proceedings against a plague of locusts which trespassed on their fields and devoured their crops. As the case was still being fought nearly half a century later, the modern gardener can sympathize with the unlucky plaintiffs, but would probably prefer the more upto-date application of lime or mus-

Another action was brought against a pest of leeches swarming in the ponds and streams of another country district of France. The judge issued a decree against the leeches trespassing further on the disputed territories, but history is silent as to whether the injunction was obeyed or ignored, with resultant punishment for contempt of court.

Animals have even been admitted as witheases in the courts. It used to be considered no offence to kill a burglar trying to break into a house. There arose the difficulty that one man living alone might ask another man living alone might ask another to his house, and then murder him, pretending that he was a robber. To get over this, it was decided that any domestic animal, such as a cat or a dog, present at the time might bear If the animal, on being questioned, satisfied the court that his master had acted in good faith, the killing was held to be justified. There are not many instances of ac-quittal.

What Happened at Kut.

Speaking at Newport, England, at a fete organised by the Comrades of the Great War, Gen. Sir Charles Towasend said that he wished he could live long enough to see what history would have to say about the defence of Kut. He was ordered to go forward with a handful of men. Instead of having 13,000 men at his disposal he should have had 113,000. He had warned the authorities of what might happen if he was asked to go on with only a limited number of effectives, but after having given the warning his duty was done. Any orders he received afterward had to be carried/out. With a sufficient number of men he could have guaranteed not only to take Bagdad, but also to hold it. The Turkish army could have been thrown into the river. He very nearly accomplished that as it was, but under the circumstances which hampered him, if Bagdad had been taken it would have had to be been taken it would have had to be evacuated the next day. He had found almost as many enemies when he came home as he had beaten in the field. He decided to halt at that place (Kut) to give the Government time to send cut more troops from over-seas, but without the necessary numseas, but without the necessary number of troops he was forced to surrender. Owing to starvation men were dying at the rate of 28 a day, dying of hunger, but at the same time, he remarked proudly: "I did not surrender even then until I was ordered to do so, and told that no relief could be sent to me."

Trapper And Guide Found In Camp

Word has been received that Rob ert Hunter of Parker's Ridge, and a companion, located Henry Braithwaite trapper and guide, of Fredericton, after a search on which they started last Tuesday. "Uncle" Henry was found at the first camp called Hunter's camp. The snow was too deep for him to attend to his trans and he was sticking close to camp in the best of health and enjoying himself.

Mr. Braithwaite was eighty years old in last January and probably is the offest professional guide and apper in active service on the callinent of America. His relatives inent of America. came anxous concerning his saf-ty some time ago, but their fearere groundless. He will come out f the woods in about a fortnight The camp in which he was in is er—by no means an ignorant man—stood up the other day in Norfolk court and informed the bench that someone had bewitched his cows. He cured the evil spell by thrusting a red-hot poker into his churn, when the evil spirit vanished in a bright flame.
