Mission Has a Narrow Escape.

HANKOW, To-Day.
Special to Evening Telegram.
The fire during the last few days devastated an area two miles long and half a mile wide. It is evident that the imperialists are determined to destroy the city. They have burned a tremendous store of shells, small arms and ammunition abandoned by the rebels. The damage by fire amounts to many millions. Some British river boats, including the gunboat Woodcock, were struck by shots during the fighting, but nobody was wounded. The Rev. Mr. Islington of the American Church Mission, entered a strong protest against the execution of Manchou women and children declaring such action would alienate the sympathy of the civilized nations. The revolutionary leaders replied they had been compelled to authorize the execution in order to placate the soldiers and the rebels, but they promised that no more executions should take place. The members of the Wesleyan Mission, the patients in the women's hospital, and the blind boys under the care of the mission, escaped death by a narrow margin in a fire which destroyed a large part of the native city at Hankow yesterday. The inmates of the mission spent the night on the lawn. The fire swept down on the Mission so close that some of the fugitives who huddled together on the grass were scorched and gave up all hope of rescue. They are all now housed in the London Mission.

Gale Cause Damage in British Isles.

LONDON, To-Day.
Special Evening Telegram.
Cyclonic gales swept over British Isles yesterday doing widespread damage; shipping suffered, buildings unroofed; vessels were driven from their moorings and the coast is strewn with wreckage.

Gone Deer Shooting.

Messrs. Turnbull, John Day and Chief Ford Windsor, of the Fire Department, left here for the Gaff Top-salls deer stalking Saturday. A special car was placed at their disposal by Mr. W. D. Reid, whose kindly act the men highly appreciated. Mr. Windsor is especially at home in the woods, where he formerly ranged in his early lumbering days, and may be looked upon in that section of the country as was the great Daniel Boone in the wilds of Kentucky in the days of the early settlers.

The Clyde Floated.

The Reid Nfld. Co. received word this morning from Little Bay by telegraph saying that the s.s. Clyde had been successfully floated by the help of H.M.S. Brilliant, Capt. Woolcombe, who arrived there at 5 this morning and had the Clyde afloat at 7.30. The Clyde was found to be making no water and resumed her route at 10 o'clock. The Reid Nfld. Co. highly appreciate the kindness of the commander of H. M. S. Brilliant, as well as that of His Excellency the Governor and the Premier, who held a conference with the result that Capt. Woolcombe lost no time in going to the rescue. The ship left here at 9 last night and on arrival at Little Bay this morning the two anchors were dropped and cables put around the bows of the Clyde. The twin screws of the warship were then set going with her donkey winches at the same time at a signal blast from the warship, while the Clyde's engines were set full speed astern. This immense combined power brought the ship off the rocks the first pull. Whilst she is not leaking, it is believed that her bottom is bulged by the rocks.

Parsons' Photographic Studio.

A visit to S. H. Parsons Studio, Water Street, east, at the present time, will certainly interest the public. Here can be seen some very handsome specimens of water colors, consisting of portraits, many of them of local ladies and gentlemen. Mr. Wm. Parsons, who recently arrived here, after spending 10 years in London, took lessons there from a French artist of renown in this city, and has executed some very beautiful work in portrait on opal. He is making a specialty of portraits in water colors of monograms, and those he has executed to date are receiving much attention. Mr. Parsons will be having St. John's for England after the Christmas season.

News From Whalers.

The whaler Cahot, Capt. Bull, arrived here this morning from Snook's Arm, having given up the voyage for the season. She secured 27 whales down there and 22 at Balena, making 59 in all.
Messrs. Hearn & Co. had news this morning by the Stella Maris that the whaler Cacholot, operating at Hawke's Harbor, caught 13 whales since last report, making in all, as far as numbers are concerned, 24 fish to date, which is equal to 55, as the vessel has to her credit 5 fine sperms. The average for past years has been 75 fish.

St. Bon's Council.

A meeting of the Council of St. Bonaventure's ex-Pupils Association was held at the College, Rev. Bro. Cullane, President of the College, invited Rt. Hon. Sir E. P. Morris, President of the Association, to take the chair. After the financial prospects of the College were discussed and plans suggested for the reduction of the debt on the new building, a pleasing event took place, viz. the presentation by the Chairman, of a handsome gold medal to Mr. J. F. McGrath, the Secretary, in recognition of his services to the Association. The Premier in handing over the gift to Mr. McGrath, said some very complimentary words about his unselfish labours and enthusiasm. On behalf of the college, Rev. Bro. Cullane eulogized all that Sir Edward had said. Mr. McGrath was deeply touched by the gift and made a suitable reply, every word having the ring of sincerity. His concluding sentence was a beautiful sentiment gem that should not be lost and we believe it original. Here it is: "If we can retain the affection of all those who shared our morning days, it is in our manhood's life a greater power than any other that the world can possibly bestow upon us." The medal is a work of art, is attached to a gold and blue ribbon, a college color, and bears the college coat of arms on one side and the Christian Bros. motto on the obverse.

Heavily Fined.

Mr. H. W. LeMessurier, the Sub-Collector of Customs, to-day had a wire from Bay of Islands, stating that Capt. Miller, Damsel of the H.M.S. Schr. Arcadia, was charged Saturday before Magistrate March with a breach of the Customs Laws in presenting a false invoice at the Customs there. He was convicted and fined $200.

To Float Off the Clyde.

Saturday afternoon Capt. Kean in the s.s. Prospero went to the assistance of the s.s. Clyde, now on the rocks at Little Bay. After working for several hours in an attempt to tow her off Capt. Kean had to give up the job as hopeless. The ship is not leaking and is in no danger of being damaged by the sea, as the water there is very calm, being only about 20 yards from the public wharf. Saturday the Reid Nfld. Co. made arrangements to have H.M.S. Brilliant sent down to tow the Clyde off. She sailed at 9 o'clock yesterday morning. Capt. Delaney, the R. N. Co's ships' husband, is gone in the Brilliant. It is expected that the job will be successfully done to-day. The Clyde is not insured and if refloated the loss would be a heavy one to the R. N. Co.

Gave Him Good Time.

Const. E. O'Flaherty arrived here from Fermuse yesterday and resumed duty to-day. He had 10 days leave to visit his relatives and before he left there an enjoyable "time" was given in his honor in Mr. Jas. Ryan's residence. A supper was served after which a concert was held during which songs were rendered by Mess. James Jackman and Murphy and Misses Bride O'Neill and Mary Staugh-Cassey and Miss J. Reddy, school teacher. After this a very enjoyable dance was held and was kept up till the wee sma' hours.

Wedding Bells.

On the 25th October, a very pretty wedding took place at the home of the bride's parents, Mr. James Noseworthy, Parade Street. The contracting parties were Mr. Edward Downton and Miss Gertrude Noseworthy. After partaking of a sumptuous repast, games and music were held during the night and on arrival at the residence of Mr. James Noseworthy, the presents were numerous and costly. We wish Mr. and Mrs. Downton many happy years of wedded life. R. M. P.

Sidewalk Sketches.

By H. L. RANN.

THE B. P. O. E.

The B. P. O. E. is a close corporation of carefree gentlemen commonly known as Elks. The ceremony of initiation is very simple consisting of a check in three figures and a whispered consultation with the Head Moose. It is easier to join the Elks than it is to get into the Methodist church, but the requirements are somewhat different. There is no goat in an Elks lodge except the candidate, and his mind is so taken up trying to sidestep a violent and unpremeditated demise that there are no tee-bes left in his system. After a man has tittered past the inner guard in a moment of reckless daring and a bright new union suit, his appetite for blithe and sparkling repartee will yield to a consuming desire to lean up against the Supreme High Tankyero, roils with an axe helve. Nobody works in an Elks lodge after eleven o'clock except the janitor and the semi-annual dues, and he goes on forever. There is no grand halling sign of distress among the Elks, either, for every member carries a roll that you couldn't throw through a horse collar. The Elk whose table manners are above par has the entrée to our most exclusive social circles, the sole exception being the W. C. T. U. At that, we would rather trust to the mercies of a benevolent Elk than have any loose coin in the immediate vicinity of a crooked deacon.

Want Unconditional Abdication

Special to Evening Telegram.
SHANGHAI, To-Day.
The first night after the capitulation of the city to the revolutionaries passed uneventfully. Perfect calm was maintained in Shanghai and outlying districts which constituted the remarkable feature of the moment. Li Ping Shun, the responsible head of the new administration of a native city and the suburbs is engaged in completing his organization. He informed a correspondent that he recognized only the "Republic of Han," and would guarantee only the only disorderly elements in China, he said, were former officials, their supporters and Manchou troops who would never be permitted to be control again. He believed the revolutionary sentiment throughout the south strongly favours the unconditional abdication of the entire empire.

The New Encyclo

11th is the work of leading department

"It is the general judgement of the world that the most complete, precise statements of facts up to the one for which Cambridge to the world."

In these words, the American Ambassador described the Encyclopaedia, of which the new 11th edition has been published by the Cambridge University Press.

This reputation, embodied in the general judgment of scholars and investigators of the world, and gained by the edition of the past, was based chiefly on this, that the Encyclopaedia Britannica has always contributed each on his own special branch of knowledge those writers who were universally recognized as leading authorities.

In the past the volumes were made illustrious by the names of Sir Walter Scott, Sir Humphrey Davy, Lord Macaulay, the great French scientists, Arago and Biot; later by Huxley and Freeman, Clerk Maxwell, Robertson Smith, Edwin Hubble, and many others. The new edition worthily sustains the reputation of the past in the standing of its contributors, the names, 90 only out of the 1,500, appended in the accompanying table will afford some guarantee.

The list of ninety names printed in this announcement comprises, for many excuses, were its fragmentary nature less evident. Not only does it mention but one name out of 17, but also it completely ignores a number of subjects no less important than those it mentions. Nothing is said here of the distinguished authorities who have dealt with the ancient civilizations of Egypt and Assyria, with Islam, with the various countries of the world, with languages and literatures, with biography, with philosophy, with sports and games. But considerations of space permit no more than the mention of a few representative names in certain fields, and, as it is this collection of names certainly represents distinction and eminence enough in a variety of fields.

This list will also serve to suggest certain things that are important in connection with the writing of the Encyclopaedia Britannica. Unlike the purely national encyclopaedias introduced in other countries, the Encyclopaedia Britannica shows a truly British liberality of spirit in this, that it turns for its contributors, wherever direction the demands of scholarship dictate. Thus among the 90 names here printed will be found representatives of the literatures of America, of France, of Germany and of Holland. Again, the distinction of its contributors affords an explanation of the fact that the Encyclopaedia Britannica is referred to, not merely as a repository of sound information, but also as, to a great extent, an original source. It is a medium through which the specialist willingly speaks to the world at large upon the results of his investigations, results which, in many cases, have as yet taken shape in no book. Thus, the new edition is full of information that is in advance of the times, the material of books yet to be written. It is a library reading, and not merely of reference, that the Encyclopaedia has become the common meeting ground upon which distinguished specialists come together from every quarter of the world of knowledge.

Leading to the new conditions under which it was prepared, the 11th edition of the Encyclopaedia Britannica, to an extent unknown in previous editions, the work itself of its eminent contributors, their knowledge enters into the very structure and arrangement of the work as a whole.

There was no dividing line between the editorial staff and contributors. Plans of treatment, connected schemes for articles, were evolved and elaborated conjointly. Specialists in a given field, forming themselves into a collegium for the treatment of their subject in all its aspects, planned and wrote to a whole series of articles which should afford the reader the desired information under any heading to which he could reasonably refer. In every case, through the medium of the editorial staff, the contributor wrote with a knowledge of what others were doing. Thus it may properly be said that the distinguished contributors to the 11th edition of the Encyclopaedia Britannica, not only wrote for the book; they collaborated, in its creation.
