no hesitation in giving the Herald the satisfaction of an answer. As our article on Monday has been represented by it as the composition or inspiration of Mr. Squires, a convenient preliminary to an attack upon him, we that Mr. Squires neither wrote nor suggested a single word of it and that he was entirely ignorant of the fact that it was being written. He had, in other words, as much knowledge of a system would assist in improving it from beginning to end as the editor himself of the Herald had. We would lessness and negligence to a minimum like to say further that, whatever the practice of the Herald may be, we are not in the habit of seeking outside assistance in the task of filling our editorial columns. As for the offensive references which its makes to the business relations of Mr. Squires and ject we are not criticusing the adminis the late editor of this paper, we know tration of the Post Master General the public is not interested in them, whose work since his assumption and they are in any case only the sort office has been recognized by all t of impertinent personalities which we be in the best interests of the publi have come to expect from the Herald. service, notwithstanding the many ob The only issue which we raised then, stacles in the way. though we are charged with having since evaded it, was in connection with the Advocate's attack upon the private affairs and reputation of one is not to be any general election until who was a public official, and who only happened to be Mr. Squires. But the Advocate not only made such an attack, but insinuated a good deal about the manner in which the duties of Mr. Squires' office were discharged. It was a bad opening to make, and we replied by the obvious method of comparing his record with that of his predecessors. It may not be the soundest of arguments, but it is the last which the Herald should deprecate, since it is fond of using i itself to the exclusion of all others except the sort of directly personal al-Herald to consult those who are likely to be the best judges. The Herald speaks in a scandalised tone of our remarks, as though they were a sort jeste. At the risk of shocking our

Those duties, however, look their character from that of the Government of which they were a part, just as do those of the different departments to-day. What better illustration of the capabilities of the PLAY STARTS.

The opening game in the 1918 series of the senior Hockey League was run off at the Prince's Rink, last night before a goodly number of spectators. The opposing teams were the Terra Nova's and Victorias.

At the Curling Rink yesterday afternoon and night, points were played for the H. D. Reid Medal (open to all) and the Taylor Medal for beginners of 2 years and under. Mr. F. W. Hayward captured the former with a score of 35 points and Mr. W. H. Butt the latter with 19 points. Following are the scores: F. W. Hayward, 35; H. J. Taylor, 30; F. T. Brehm, 30; D. P. Duff, 30; W. F. Joyce, 29; E. J. Rowe, 29; J. A. Branscombe, 26; W. H. Dudger, 26; S. C. Thompson, 26; D. Mcesent regime could we ask than the cord of, say, the Tonnage Commitstances, reported in Thursday's issue of this what we stand most in need of in all departments of the Government, is an inspectorial system, properly organized and effectively carried out. If this were done and inspectors, vested with authority to deal with offenses coming under their notice, appointed, there would be a restoration of public confidence, and inefficiency would have no place in any office. Take the case to which reference has already been made. The official in question had been on the P. O. travelling staff for complaint. Yet, due to causes, which minutes rest. With but five men on put on and those who misses have to be subsequently ascartained, he dropped into habits of negligence, with the result that for nearly a year with the result that for nearly a year and a half, he had been, perhaps unconsciously, holding back letters or allowing unstamped and departmental correspondence to accumulate in his mail room, without making any effort correspondence to accumulate in his mail room, without making any effort whatsoever to hand same over to addressees. There had been, evidently, no attempt on the part of this unfortunate clerk to tamper with any of tunate clerk to tamper with any of the held up letters, and his cash account being straight, makes the reason for his action the more difficult to comprehend.

The Daily Post of Sydmer, the victorias worked their way east. Power made an attempt but failed to beat St. John.
