general had something to say about the issue. He might do much of the speaking, but they did the voting. He was the elevator merger, the representative of the trusts, the visible representative of the corporate interests in this province, and he was at the head and front of the oppositiin to the government. That government had risked its life upon a very radical elevator policy and an even more aggressive farm machinery bill. With this legislation on the one side and the trusts which were tion on the one side and the trusts which were fighting it on the other side, the public saw the issue clearly enough. That was the big issue in the province.

You can follow the Bennet trail by the success of the government. The government captured it.

After the violet has blossomed, it does not advertise nor beat a drum but continues to bloom in a quiet, dignified way, offering itself to the world with all the indifference with which a country grocer sells dried apples. Most of the violets in the world are eaten by cows, but sometimes the beautiful flowers are discovered by man and he induces the plants to go into a green-Gleichen, redeemed it from the enemy. There are house and bloom in a businesslike ar elevators in that riding. The government made a sweep of Bassano. There are elevators there. Turning to the South, the government swept Taber, Warner, Little Bow, Cardston, Claresholm and Nanton, and came nearer winning in High River than any person would have expected a week before R. B. Bennett came into Alberta to take part.

The hot house violets are more beautiful than the country violets and are probably just as modest, but not as far as price goes. Along about Christmas time modesty comes about $3 per bunch, and small bunches at that. This teaches us a great lesson. Modesty is beautiful and does not harm anyone providing he or she employs a good business manager.

Many an actress is so modest that she employs two stout men to chase in the election. The South remained true to Sifton because it had no use for Bennett.

The Season's Newest Styles in Fine Footwear

EW arrivals of the better makes in both Canadian and American makes. Footwear that has more of the fine elements of style and comfort incorporated into their make-up than has ever distinguished footwear of former seasons, either in this store or elsewhere. These are shoes of character, shoes that give one the idea of not merely being satisfied, but distinctly well fitted, a sensation that is often lacking, even in wearing the highest priced footwear, on account of these many excellencies of style and fine workmanship.

We have been called upon this season to shoe Calgary's particular dressers in larger and larger numbers, for the word has gone around.

Button Oxfords are to be fashion's favorites this season, and whether your fancy runs to patents, gun metals, tan calf, white buck, champagne, or red vici kid or grey buck, you will find them here in your particular size and width. Pumps are again in strong favor for this season, for they are
