election was impending.

Mr. Gladstone said he thought something definite ought to be known about the period

Mr. Balfour declined to fix the date, but said it was not desirable that the elections should occur in the existing nearly ex-bausted state of the treasury. This is thought to indicate that the Government does not intend to dissolve Parliament for several months.

Mr. Labouchere's motion was rejected,

Knowing that their days LONDON, April 1 .- The official report caucus of the Unionists of Ulster gave no filea of the warlike tone of the speakers at that meeting. Knowing that their days are numbered as belonging to the Government majority, and seeing that the Irish Parliament is the dominant fact of the near future, these advocates of constitutional order under the Tory regime met to declare givil war in the event of tutional order under the Tory regime met to declare civil war in the event of a Liberal majority attering the constitution a Liberal majority altering the constitution.
All the Ulster members were present except three. Some flery spirits urged a plain declaration of an immediate resort to arms when Ulster is placed under the Dublin Parliament. The Liberal papers treat the proceedings as buncombe and the prediction of rebellion as mercy vanging. Interproceedings as buncombe and the preciection of rebellion as mere vaporing. Interviews with several Ulster delegates in the lobby to-day gave the impression of an intense hastility to home rule. Money was partly subscribed to arm 300,000 men, and Col. Sanderson boasted that he would respond to the call to a revolt. As shrewd an observer as Lord Randolph Churchill still professes to believe that Ulster will fight, but no fear of this nature will in the slightest deterer at let it Liberal policy. LONDON, April 1.—The Liberals are anxious to settle whether the elections will take place on the voters' register of 1891 or that of 1892. Mr. Gladstone claimed that if dissolution occurred in the autumn a special bill ought to be introduced bringing the new register in operation. Mr. Balfour fenced the demand. Unable to refute Mr. Gladstone, he simply asserted that the Crown had full discretion to deal with the matter. His response put the Opposition is Crown had full discretion to deal with the matter. His response put the Opposition in a bad temper, and they tilted against every vote of supply, especially attacking the estimates for the royal pulsees. Mr. Morton sarcastically protested against the vote for the Buckingham Palace rateatcher. Mr. Labouchere advised that their rateatcher be brought to Parliament where he could catch sometining, and he wanted Kensington Palace to be used as an art gallery and Hampton Court as a public preserve. Pat O'Brien urged that Kew Palace be turned into a house for old soldiers or for the Loninto a house for old soldiers or for the Lon-O'Brien urged that Kew Palace be turned into a house for old soldiers or for the London poor. Mr. Storey held that it was shabby for royal personages to take palaces rent free and also to sponge the public to keep them in repair. There was a series of similar hot, sharp democratic utterances indicating bad times for royalties in the coming Radical Parliament. The Government members maintained discrect silence, carrying the votes with the usual majorities.
