norning but prices remained firm. There was quite an advance in the price of old hay, some loads selling as high as $12 50 and others going as low as $10 50. There were about 25 loads in all offered about eight of which were new hay. The demand for new hay is not rearly as brisk as for old. Some sold as low as $7 50. Most of the new hay, how ever, brought as high as $8. Oats remained firm, with a strong demand, and there seems no present likelinood of any drop in prices. The prevailing price at present is from $1 60 to $1 64, nost of the first-class quality finding a very brisk sale at the high price. There were a few strawberries offered and some cherries, but there were at the old prices and sales were very slow.

LIVE STOCK.

Toronto, July 8 .- Trade was quiet and prices easier today. Export cattle are off 25c to 35c. Common butcher cattle, mixed cows and steers off 35c to 50c. Choice butcher cattle scarce and prices steady Supplies this week have been very heavy, and the steady pressure has brought prices down. Buying for export has been heavy in view of present high prices in the old country, and up till now prices in the old country, and up till now vessel space has been ample. Late advices, however, intimate that a couple of sailings scheduled for next week may be petroit Electric. cancelled. In this event cattle will have to be held over. The demand for export cattle has therefore suddenly gone off to some extent, and the market is easier and likely to be easier in consequence.

Choice but have been suddenly gone off the source of scarce and therefore little, if any, change in prices. The commoner butcher cattle, however, which are now plentiful, have Mackay, com.

DR. JOHNSON'S FOOD.

Dr. Johnson may have been justified in asserting that he could write a better cookery book than has ever yet beeen written," but his personal tastes in food were decidedly coarse. According to Mrs. Piozzi, "his favorite dainties were a leg of pork boiled till it dropped from the bone, a veal pie with plums and sugar, the outside cut Following are the results of the of a salt buttock of beef, and he has races of the Dundas Centre Sunday been known to call for the butterboat containing the lobster sauce during Beatrice Williamson, Edith McGuffin, the second course, and pour the whole of its contents over his plum pud-

However, a Johnsonian cookery-book would undoubtedly prove good readplace in FitzGerald's library. Fitz-Boys' race, 7 years and under-Gor- Gerald, like many other persons of simple tastes, was fond of gastronomical literature, and we find him writing to Fanny Kemble: "I was so comforted to find that your mother had some hand in 'Dr. Kitchener's Cookery Book,' which has always been guide, philosopher and friend in such matters. I can't help liking a cookery book." FitzGerald liked few books. He kept a commonplace book headed, "Half Hours With the Worst Authors."-London Chronicle.

HOW TO WEAR THE KILT. In Eskine's book on "The Kilt: How to Wear It," there appears the following letter regarding the point of "length": "I would like to draw attention to the prevailing habit-a custom of recent years-of wearing the kilt Helen Thompson, Lotty Ward and too long, which is done by letting its lower edge wholly or partially cover the knees, thus making a petticoat of the kilt. Indeed, in some old paintings, such as that said to be of an Earl of Moray at Donibristle, the kilt is very much above the knees. There is a feeling of false modesty abroad which obliges many moderns who wear the kilt to lower its edge to hide the knees, thus taking away very much from the true character of the dress. The knees are symbolic of strength, and ought to be shown in a man. We use the term 'weak-kneed' when denoting defective moral or physical courage, and surely Highlanders should not be ashamed to discover their knees." Savs Lord Archibald Campbell in his book on "Highland Arms and Dress": "When the kilt has been adjusted, the wearer kneeling, it should barely touch the Master Lester McGillivray, of this as it is apt to look ill and give a kick city, is spending the summer months that is very ugly in walking if worn too long.
