JUDGE WOOD EXCLUDES CONSPIRACY EVIDENCE

Rules That Defense Had Not Made Sufficient Connection for Admission

Boise, Idaho, July 19.—The field for argument both by the prosecution and the defence in the trial of Wm. D. Haywood was limited today by Judge Fremont Wood, who removed from consideration of the jury all evidence bearing on the alleged conspiracy of mine owners and others against the Western Federation of Miners. Judge Wood decided that the defence had not legally connected the Mine Owners' association, the Citizens' Alliance of Colorado and the Pinkerton Detective agency in laying a foundation for the evidence introduced by the defence, with the accusation that the charge against Haywood and his co-defendants is the outcome of a conspiracy to exterminate the Federation. Immediately following this decision argument began.

Attorney Hawley, leading counsel for the state, spoke for two hours and fifteen minutes of the afternoon session, the morning session having been adjourned to enable Judge Wood to prepare his decision. Every seat in the court room was occupied. Outside the enclosure reserved for attorneys and newspaper men were many persons prominent in public and private life. Governor Gooding, ex-Governor Morrison, several state officers, Captain McFarland, Julian P. Stuenkel, a son of the murdered man, and a large gathering of members of the bar of Idaho and adjoining states were present. Haywood sat behind six of his lawyers in an invalid chair with on his right and his eldest daughter sat beside her mother. Haywood's half sister and his step-father had seats close to the defence group.

Mr. Hawley, who has been ill for several days as a result of the strain of the long trial, began his address in a voice almost inaudible to all but the jurors. He apologized for this, explaining that he had feared he would be unable owing to ill-health to deliver a prolonged address. Mr. Hawley is the actor of the Boise bar. He is a man of impressive presence and aggressive speech. Warning to his subject, his voice lost all trace of weakness. He denounced the defendant and his alleged co-conspirators in severe terms, and maintained the truth of Orchard's story.

Boise, Idaho, July 20.—James Hawley, leading counsel for the State of Idaho, presenting the first argument in the case against Wm. D. Haywood, spoke for nearly eight hours, distributed over three sessions of the court. Even when the session today had extended beyond the customary limit, every seat in the courtroom was occupied, and remained so until the last word was spoken. None listened more attentively to the argument than Haywood. From time to time he took copious notes in a small book, and frequently made suggestions to one or other of his lawyers, seven of whom were in court today. Throughout analysis of Orchard's testimony in contradiction of Orchard's story concluded frequently with the denunciation of witness after witness as a wilful perjurer or intentional falsifier.

When he had spoken nearly six hours, Mr. Hawley reached Caldwell, where, in December, 1905, the preparations for the assassination of Stuenkel with a bomb were afoot. His voice now found a sympathetic note, and as he told of the last movements of the former governor the crowd leaned forward to catch the speaker's every word.

Mr. Hawley's peroration was impressive. There was no attempt at emotion; but only a strong note of deep sincerity and great earnestness when he pleaded for an honest judgment. Mr. Hawley did not charge that a majority of even that many of the members of the Western Federation of Miners were criminals, but that the evil doers of the officers and the scum of the organization had brought discredit on the rank and file. The time had come when decent men should rise and make war on the evil influence that was the curse of all labor organizations.

On the adjournment of the court until Monday morning, Mr. Hawley was showered with congratulations.

WILL ESTABLISH A PAPER AT ALBERNI

R. J. Burde, Late News Editor of Colonist, Will Locate on West Coast

R. J. Burde, formerly news editor of the Colonist, left last evening on the steamer Ties for Alberni, where he is starting a newspaper. The first number will appear August 1st. From Nome to Frisco, from Montreal to the Pacific, very much so in Victoria and even more so in Winnipeg. Mr. Burde is well and favorably known. His ripe experience and his wide acquaintance with men and affairs as well as his experience in the newspaper business peculiarly fit him for such an undertaking and it speaks well for the prospects of Alberni that Mr. Burde has decided to locate there.

He is particularly well versed in British Columbia affairs, having been engaged in newspaper work in Victoria, Vancouver and New Westminster, for several years in each place.

Mr. Burde will install an up-to-date plant, to which he will add as the growing demands of the place require.

POLICE SEE MYSTERY IN DEATH OF NURSE

Body of Miss Jane Lawley Found on Beach at Rifle Range

CIRCUMSTANCES ARE SUSPICIOUS

Indications That Death Was Due to Strangulation—No Evidence of Drowning.

(From Saturday's Daily)

With her eyes starting from her head, her face black from strangulation and her clothes badly disordered, the body of Jane Lawley, trained nurse, formerly of Blackburn infirmary, Lan-cashire, but recently housekeeper at the Provincial Royal Jubilee hospital, was discovered at 12 o'clock yesterday opposite the three hundred yard range on Clover Point beach. The body was found well above high water mark. Nothing definite is known as to the cause of death, but very suspicious circumstances surround it. Corporal Hart will hold an inquest in all probability today.

Miss Lawley left the residence of Miss Davies, Mason street, where she has been housekeeper since January, at the residence of H. Swinerton, 3 Harrison street, Mrs. Swinerton being ill. When she failed to arrive, Mrs. Swinerton became uneasy and sent to the messenger service for a boy whom she despatched to the dead nurse's residence to discover why she did not come. Miss Davies was surprised, but nothing further was known of the case until the discovery of the body.

Two city workmen, Cox and Smith, busy thinning the broom on the Dallas road just opposite the rifle range, yesterday noon, went down to the sea shore to eat their lunch. Seeing a dark object upon the beach they descended and found it to be the body of a woman, the skirts of her dress thrown above her head, the hands thrown out convulsively on either side and the face black as coal. They ran to the top of the cliff, and hastily summoned Patrol Driver Jones, who lives in the vicinity.

The patrol wagon with Detective Palmer soon arrived upon the scene and the body was conveyed to Smith's undertaking rooms, Yates street. At the top of the cliff the dead woman's hand was found pinned to the ground with a couple of hat pins, while a bag near by contained a change of clothing, such articles as she would require on a few days' stay upon a case of a few days' stay upon a case.

Near by the pieces of a letter were to be seen. It was in a childish hand and from such of it as Chief of Police Langley has succeeded to read, together it appears to be from a niece of the dead woman in the old country.

Just about an hour before the finding of the body, Patrol Driver Jones noticed a white skiff enter the bay with a single occupant. The man disembarked some little distance from the spot where the body was later found and walking thither he remained for some few minutes. Then hurriedly retracing his steps to his skiff he rowed away. Later when the boat was found the actions of the man appeared suspicious and the police are now searching for him.

Miss Jane Lawley graduated from Blackburn infirmary, Lancashire, some eight or ten years ago. She came out to this country upon the inducements of Miss Cox, a local nurse, who was a member of her same graduating class. After private nursing for some time, she entered the Royal Jubilee hospital some six months ago as housekeeper, retaining that position until the first of the month. Her services were perfectly satisfactory to the hospital authorities, but she herself had for some time been dissatisfied with the remuneration given. She purposed proceeding to Seattle the end of the month and from there to San Francisco in pursuit of the practice of her profession.

The deceased was in excellent health until recently. On Tuesday evening last she appeared somewhat poorly but nothing was thought of it. For some time she had been displaying a good deal of interest in the spiritualistic teachings, but she had always been regarded as of well balanced intellect. She was singularly uncommunicative with regard to herself, her relatives and her personal affairs. Beyond the address of a single female friend, Mrs. Angrows, 59 Connaught road, Kensington road, Victoria, nothing is known with regard to her relatives in the old country. In appearance she was dark and about middle height. She weighed about 150 pounds. According to Detective Palmer the body of the deceased when found, was located with her feet two inches above high water mark which would preclude the possibility of her being drowned. Upon her right arm a heavy slab of wood was resting. Her watch was stopped at 12 o'clock exactly.

(From Sunday's Daily.)

Mystery continues to shroud the death of Jane Lawley, the nurse whose body was found on Friday afternoon last at Clover Point beach and whether suicide or murder it is unlikely that the autopsy and inquest which takes place on Monday will throw much light upon it.

It transpires, however, that the dead nurse had been in somewhat poor health for the two months prior to her death and this in conjunction with a disposition naturally inclined to melancholia may have induced her to take her life. Why she should have chosen death by drowning, and everything points to the possibility of her being the cause, when as a nurse she had the comparatively painless method lent by the hypodermic syringe at her disposal, is a mystery.

Additional details gathered by the Colonist prove that the dead woman was a native of Bodmin, Cornwall. Upon her arrival with a boarding party from Mrs. Knight, Pandora street, was a regular attendant of St. Barnabas' Anglican church. For some time, since becoming interested in the speculation of the district, she had discontinued attending church services, and about the same time her natural melancholia deepened. She was unable to take care of her domestic duties, and on several occasions when cases offered she refused them for no apparent reason.

The police are still engaged upon the case.

WELL ADAPTED

Place Decided on Almost Idealment of Tranquille is a beautiful place in the hills west of the Kettle of the Fraser, by the anti-tuberculosis province. The directors in charge at this point is a committee of nine, the chairman, rendered a report yesterday.

The sanitarium by 10,000 acres of the society.

The following by the committee anti-tuberculosis report upon a visit at a meeting held day:

To the Chairman Board of Directors of Columbia Anti-Tuberculosis Society—You stating of Dr. J. Westminister, Dr. Coover, Mr. A. S. Dr. C. J. Fagan, Toronto, and appointing a report on building sanitarium, be hundred and one situated on a plateau lowly.

The first place reached North Bay, about a quarter of the Cana station. The elevation of the site is about 1,100 feet and is well timbered and trees protect the north-east wind, are the best.

It is claimed that the cost of the property is about $25,000. The owners of the property included a number of gentlemen. Your committee have been over the site and have considered the price. It would be well to reduce it if they will. They will not do so unless they are sure it is a good investment.

The next place situated at the lake. Here your committee visited some of the best places. All are good locations and very well equipped as to food, water and exposure to prevent disease.

The last place was Tranquille. It is a beautiful place, known not only in Columbia, but in the United States and Mrs. Fortuna Conroy receive it simple way have the community.
