TELEGRAPHERS' STRIKE.

On Thursday afternoon last, the people of this continent were astonished beyond measure, by the news that the whole telegraph system was demoralized by the striking of every member of the Brotherhood of Telegraphers, an organization that was not known to exist, except by a very few persons, outside of the operators themselves.

The managers of the companies send out encouraging reports, and managers severely and seem to have laid their plans well. A day or two previous to the strike, a short paragraph appeared in the despatches, stating that certain demands were being made by telegraph operators for increased pay.

There are three classes of lines, viz: Commercial, Railroad and Accommodation. The two first explain themselves; the latter is used for both commercial and railroad messages, as in most of the stations along the line of the W. & A. Railway.
