A Suburban Diplomatist

Nobody could have looked at Cyrus Toppan on the evening of his return from a visit to his nephew without knowing that he had enjoyed the week. 'I've got a little something to tell you about my new niece,' he said to Captain Saunders and Capt. Bolles, when his wife had thoughtfully departed to a neighbor's house, and left him with his two friends. 'Tell on,' said the two captains. 'You let us light up, and then you needn't look for anything in the line of interruptions,' added Captain Bolles. 'We will nod if we see occasion.'

'You know I've always had some doubts what kind of a wife a feller like Henry, with his head way up in the clouds, would pick him out,' said Mr. Toppan, and the captains nodded.

'Well, I guess Providence had a hand in the choosing of Emily,' continued the host. 'She's as neat a little craft as ever I set eyes on, and she's got a first-class head-piece, what's more. They're living about ten miles out of the city, in a mighty pretty little suburb, and they've got the corner lot in a good neighborhood—nice houses on both streets.'

'I said to Henry: "Doesn't it cost you pretty steep?" For I knew his writing didn't bring him in any great of an income yet, though he's coming on. And he said: "It don't cost what you'd think 't would. In fact, this wasn't considered a very desirable lot till Emily got to work on it."

'Well, of course, I wanted to know the meaning of that. So he told me just what happened. Seems they wanted to be about that far from town, and they met the agent for a lot of new houses somewhere, and he told 'em of this place. Said he and his wife had lived there for a few months and then moved to town, and 'twas a pretty place. So they went right along out to see it. The rent was reasonable, so reasonable that Emily got kind of thoughtful. Henry was for taking it, same as he always does good things, as if the ravens had fetched it to him. But Emily's built different.

'She looked the agent right in the eye, and said she, "What's the out about it?" And he saw 'twasn't any use to make up any pretty stories or beat round the bush, so he told the truth.

'You see that big house down there?' he said. 'Well, that man pays rent for three of these houses, his own and two married sons', and he keeps 'em.'

'Henry said Emily began to smile and nod.

'And every afternoon when they set out they make right for this corner lot,' says the agent. 'I don't know what 'tis, 'tacts them so, whether it's the slope, or the grass is greener, or what, but here's where they land, and scratch and dig till they're called home for supper. And he says he can't help it—small fowl have got to have their liberty. And my wife likes a flower-garden and smooth grass.'

'I see," Emily said, when he stopped. "So do I like a garden and I shall have a pretty one here." And that very day Henry signed a five years' lease, with a couple of portable hen-houses thrown in.

'Going to keep hens?' the agent asked her, when she bartered for the hen-houses, and Emily smiled, and said, "For a while, maybe."

'Henry was kind of uneasy till she explained her plans to him, for he's no farmer, nor he never took to hens. But he saw the light after she'd talked to him a while. They did their work and moving mornings till the day they moved. 'Twas their first afternoon—Emily took a rest after dinner, and when she got up and looked on the lawn, there, sure enough, was a whole posse o' hens and some chickens! Henry set their portable hen-houses up that night, and next morning a farmer brought them some hens and put 'em in the houses, likewise chickens. Henry superintended the job. Emily never went near 'em, nor asked a question.

'That afternoon Henry let out their live stock while Emily was taking her rest. Then he sat down and wrote for an hour or so in a complete little place they call his "study" at the back o' the house. When Emily waked up she went in there and rumpled up his hair and told him he'd written long enough, and to lay off and take a snooze before tea time same as was their usual arrangement.

'I'll call the hens and feed 'em, and get 'em under cover," says Emily. "That'll be my part of the work."

'Well, Henry said he stretched out on the lounge she has all fixed up for him, and fell off into a doze, when he waked up 'twas most dark, and he lay there listening to voices. Emily's and a man's. Emily's was cool and pleasant, but the man's had a pretty mad sound.

'I should like to know what you've done with my hens!' he was saying.

'Your hens!' Emily repeats after him, in a real surprised tone. 'Why, where were they?'

'Well—'hem'—says the man, 'they—why, I suppose they were on your lawn.'

'Oh,' says Emily, 'how unfortunate! You see, we've just moved, and our hens only came this morning. I haven't even asked my husband how many he bought. I've been so busy getting settled, you know. He let them out while I was taking my nap and now he's getting a little rest, after his writing. I told him I'd call the hens in, feed them, and get them under cover every afternoon. I had some meal for them, and they came running to me just as fast. And you think your hens were all here, too? Now we'll take my little electric lantern and go right out to the hen houses, and you've only to pick yours out and take them right away. Of course, I wouldn't keep them. I don't know much about hens, but they will follow you, won't they? Won't they know your voice?'

'Henry said he held his breath, expecting maybe the man would say something that would oblige him to get right up off'n the lounge and go in and deal with him; but instead of that, he said the man bust right out into a roar.

'See here,' he said, 'you've got the best of me, and I'll wager you know it, whether you know much about hens or not. You keep 'em overnight and let 'em out to-morrow at the usual time, and I'll see that they're sorted out by my man and taken home, and kept home. I'll have a little place made back of the house where they will get room enough. And any eggs you get from their visit,' says he, 'you're welcome to. And look here, when you get settled I'll have my folks call on you,' he said. "And now I'll bid you good-night."

'Good night!' says Emily, sweet as ever. 'We'd love to have them come. And, oh, Mr. Brown, when it's later in the season, I hope you'll accept a couple of broilers for this trouble I've put you to. I think perhaps we shan't keep hens so very long.'

'I knew that' before you told me," says the man. And Henry said that as he passed by the side window on his way home the window was open, and Henry could hear him chuckling good and hearty.

MEMORIAL ALTAR AND PULPIT.

Mrs. Binney, widow of the Right Reverend Hibernian Binney, fourth bishop of the diocese of Halifax, left by will the sum of £400 sterling to provide an altar and pulpit for the cathedral if erected within ten years of her death. The architects have been asked to prepare plans in keeping with the rest of the building, and thus the cathedral will have splendid memorial altar and pulpit in memory of the bishop who began the cathedral building movement.—Church Work.

Marshalltown, Digby Co., N. S. January 4th, 1909. Empire Liniment Co., Limited. Bridgetown, N. S.

Dear Sirs:—Last winter while working my horses in the woods, one fell, straining the cords of the fetlock so badly it laid him up. I used all the different liniments including horse liniments without the slightest benefit.

My son bought your EMPIRE LINIMENT and a few bottles made a complete cure, so that I was able to put him back to work in the woods.

I will cheerfully furnish any further information to anyone and will say without hesitation your liniment cannot be excelled.

Yours very truly, J. F. TRASK.

TUBERCULOSIS CURED IN A NEW WAY.

A remarkable series of cures effected in advanced cases of tuberculosis is attracting the attention of medical men. One case has been under the supervision of a distinguished physician for five months, and the patient who was suffering from consumption of both lungs and throat, has been pronounced virtually well. A report from the physician on the medical aspects of the case will probably be published soon. Arrangements have been made for subjecting the treatment to a decisive test by applying it to six or eight hospital cases and securing a scientific demonstration.

The treatment is described as a thermochemical attraction, the germs of the disease being drawn by chemical heat through a ray of inflammation from the lung or throat to the surface of the skin, and expelled when the wound is washed. It has been practised by a scientific investigator, William Doig, for several years at his private dispensary, and medical men are astonished by the results in cases of tuberculosis which they have considered hopeless.

DO IT NOW.

Now is the time to get rid of your rheumatism. You can do so by applying Chamberlain's Liniment. Nine cases out of ten are simply muscular rheumatism due to cold or damp, or chronic rheumatism, and yield to the vigorous application of this liniment. Try it. You are certain to be delighted with the quick relief which it affords. Sold by W. A. WARREN, BRIDGETOWN; A. E. ATLEE, ANNAPOLIS ROYAL, and BEAR RIVER DRUG STORE.

Carnegie Urges Taft to Avert War

New York, April 21.—The hope that President Taft may find a way open to invite the leading naval powers of the world to consider if some agreement should not be reached to avert the danger of war between England and Germany, which "threatens to convulse the world," was expressed by Andrew Carnegie in his address as president at the annual meeting of the Peace Society of the City of New York.

Mr. Carnegie's subject was "The Wrong Path." He said, in part: "We have been assured that 'an overpowering army and navy is the cheap insurance of nations.' 'None are more secure from attack than before; on the contrary, the danger of war has increased. Britain spent upon army and navy last year $345,000,000, most of this upon her navy; Germany, $233,000,000; about half upon the navy; our peaceful republic expended upon army, navy and war pensions no less than $470,000,000.

"Britain has just discovered in Germany a menace to her existence. Germany, having equal rights upon the sea, fails to recognize the right of Britain to remain a menace to her, which she long has been, claiming to be 'Mistress of the Seas.' The United States, no longer free from naval conditions, is in no mood to remain menaced by any power.

"It seems pre-eminently the mission of our peaceful industrial republic to lead the world to the reign of peace under law. She it was who led The Hague conference in urging an international supreme court. She covets no new territory. On the contrary she has relinquished control of Cuba, and is preparing the Filipinos, for independence and is at heart the friend of all nations.

"One cannot but indulge the hope that our president in due time may find a way open, without being intrusive, to exert his vast influence in favor of peace: to call the attention of the two disturbing powers to the fact that our country has a right to speak, if not to protest, in behalf of its own imperilled interests, and perhaps to invite the leading naval power to consider whether some kind of agreement could not be now reached which would avert the ap-peril of war has increased, to convulse the world in the not distant future."

BILIOUSNESS AND CONSTIPATION.

For years I was troubled with biliousness and constipation, which made life miserable for me. My appetite failed me. I lost my usual force and vitality. Pepsin preparations and cathartics only made matters worse. I do not know where I should have been to-day had I not tried Chamberlain's Stomach and Liver Tablets. The tablets relieve the ill feeling at once, strengthen the digestive functions, purify the stomach, liver and blood, helping the system to do its work naturally.—Mrs. Royce Potts, Birmingham, Ala. These tablets are for sale by W. A. WARREN, BRIDGETOWN; A. E. ATLEE, ANNAPOLIS ROYAL, and BEAR RIVER DRUG STORE.

"PAYS TO ADVERTISE!"

London, April 26.—The Prince of Wales paid a remarkable tribute to the value and necessity of advertising in presiding over the meeting of the Royal Commission for the Brussels, Rome and Turin Exhibitions at Marlborough House.

"Experience has shown," his Royal Highness said, "that even in the case of firms having an established reputation and world-wide connections attempts to discontinue advertising have usually been followed by a diminution in the sales effected."

"The neglect by Great Britain of one of the most important forms of national advertising would be equally detrimental to her interests as a manufacturing country."
