

Laverie—"The ship had to be repaired immediately, so, as special men were called on, I was engaged." We learn that, on the first voyage after repairs, the vessel went down with forty men on board.

Who were they ?

A popular minister and a student were asked, while travelling on the train, recently, what brewery they represented ?

D. M.—"I must go and have a sleep."

Med.—"It's a medical un wisdom to sleep after meals."

D. M.—"Oh, but I was only in the dining-hall."

Scene on the eve of the exam. in Homiletics.

A.B.—"Say, Brown, what's a homily ?"

Br.—"Gosh ! I don't know ; do you ?"

Voice from No. 10—"I'll tell you : homo a man, and ly (Lee) a little preacher.

Dr. Talmage's youngest daughter was very fond of evening gaieties, and, as a consequence, sometimes slept late in the morning. One morning she was greeted with the stern gaze of her parent and received the depressing salutation :

"Good morning, daughter of sin."

"Good morning, father," was her rejoinder.

At a recent S.S. Convention of a Presbytery, not a thousand miles from here, a graduate of our College was telling how well his Bible class had done during the past year, even though he, their teacher, was absent over half the time. The representative of the Century Fund, who happened to be there, suggested that if the minister were absent from his class all next year, they would contribute double. At this suggestion, our graduate, rising to his feet, told the following story : "A little boy had swallowed a sixpence. His mother, in great alarm hastened to send for the doctor. 'No, ma, send for the minister,' screamed the little boy. 'The minister ? Why, it's the doctor you mean.' 'No, no, it's the minister ; because pa said if anyone could get money out of a man, the
