

ada and serve as lobby groups and beacons on the matter.

Apart from organizations such as those specifically designed to help improve the status of women at both the federal and provincial levels of jurisdiction, nine provinces and the federal government have established human rights commissions responsible, among other duties, for promoting the principle of equal opportunities for everyone.

