INTERNATIONAL CENTRE FOR OCEAN DEVELOPMENT BILL

SECOND READING—DEBATE ADJOURNED

Hon. Heath Macquarrie moved the second reading of Bill C-22, to establish the International Centre for Ocean Development and to amend the Financial Administration Act in relation thereto.

He said: Honourable senators, two speeches from me in one night is a violation of the prohibition against double jeopardy for honourable senators. Also, honourable senators, I have been sitting here listening to points of order, enduring standing votes, sitting in the evening, and thinking that I should have stayed in the House of Commons. I thought I had left this sort of thing behind.

Hon. Charles McElman: You don't really mean that.

Senator Macquarrie: No, and you know that.

Honourable senators, although I do not like the hour of the day, I am pleased to have the honour to bring this bill to the baptismal font. It means a great deal and adds a dimension to our internationalism. The bill deals with a most important food area, primarily the culture of the sea.

I noticed that in the other place there was a discussion involving members of all parties, and that the measure passed all stages within a couple of hours. I think that that is an indication of support for this measure to establish ICOD. I am overwhelmed by these alphabetic conglomerations, and I am not quite sure which is the more favourable. I was ready to have a little play on words about the importance of the word "cod." I was going to wax eloquent about the importance of the cod fishery to Atlantic Canada. I sent to the Library for the old Nova Scotia coat of arms which Senator MacDonald of Halifax, so young, did not even remember, but Senator Hicks did. Then I happened to read what was there and I noticed that my wonderful codfish turned out to be a salmon. Why Nova Scotia is so famous for salmon while New Brunswick is not, I am not sure, but it is a noble fish. It is a fine coat of arms although it has been replaced by one even more authentically Scottish.

Down in Massachusetts, of course, in the very Assembly of the Lower House, a golden cod recalls the importance of that
