

Friends

Were I a great and noble man—a land-mark of my day, I'd want a thousand, thousand minds to feel my friendship's sway;
But since it seems in humble ways
I'll live my whole life through,
Why then I'll hope to win content and real good friends, a few.