

CHAPTER X.

Mark meets, at the Allan Steamship wharf, an artist who has just landed in this country with his wife and two children—He renders the stranger an act of kindness, and thus begins an intimacy which is fraught with important consequences to Mark—The artist meets an old and dangerous enemy—Mark visits his new friend, and while with him hears a startling story. 64

CHAPTER XI.

Mrs. Horner, a directress, who complains to Mark and his wife that one of the oldest girls of their charge has committed the outrage of speaking to a lady's daughter on the street—A sudden disappearance—Sad and terrible forebodings—Langdon's body found in the Canal—A foul murder. 73

CHAPTER XII.

Mr. and Mrs. Dawson have a remarkable ride.—Service interrupted by a dog-fight in the church—A ride on an ox-sled in midsummer—Our friends are startled by the collapse of a bedstead. 80

CHAPTER XIII.

Another sad death—Two orphans admitted to the Bethesda—How vanity was squelched in this institution—Women who delighted in the arbitrary nod. 98

CHAPTER XIV.

The wood hee—Mrs. Dawson offends several individuals because she objects to their smoking in her kitchen—"Uncle Sandy" effects a reconciliation—May's mortification and sorrow because she fears she has not cooked enough for dinner—"Uncle Sandy" again comes to the rescue. 109

CHAPTER XV.

A baby girl—John's new house—his removal to Dexter—Narrow-minded parishioners—Ben Fogg and Kitty Gordon. 116

CHAPTER XVI.

Intelligence of the children of the Bethesda—The school examination—Manner of indenturing—Tommy Radcliff's trials. 125

CHAPTER XVII.

John gives Ben Fogg a chance to show his unique qualities—Fogg's meanness arouses the indignation of Aunt Kitty Gordon—Crazy Polly—Fogg refuses her shelter, and Aunt Kitty takes her in during a cold rainstorm. 131