The country you have been viewing in the perusal of this little piece, is extensive, mostly lying under wood. The climate diffors from that of your native soil. The extremity of summer heat and winter cold, has been laid before you. What you must lay your account with, after obtaining a grant of land from government, is, in the first instance, hard labour, and labour of that description to which you have never been hitherto accustomed. The clearing of land is certainly as laborious a work as any man can be employed in, particularly during the extreme heat of the summer months, in Ganada. But besides this there are many other things which you would do well to take into consideration: You must have a habitation to shelter your family, your grounds will produce you the materials, but a wooden house, even of the ordinary kind, sufficient to defend your gainst the severity of winter, will cost much labour and expence ; true; you may obtain assistance from kind neighbours, but L would not have you place too much dependance upon this as many have been disap pointed. Another-thing under your notice is the expence of carriage which cousiderably adds to the expence of cultivation, hath in many instances been found to equal nearly the whole price. It is true indeed, that your families will be supplied with plenty, you will feel no want of provisions. but there are many other things which ye

a d t

ti

r

р с

a

0

C

yb

t

C

: "U

1

d

. e

. 8

0

o' n n

÷ 0

0

'n

1. C

. .

ċ

...p

V

N