

THE MOST IMPORTANT NEWS Ever Announced to the Women of This City.

We are pleased to announce the opening of a department in our store devoted exclusively to Women's Fine Footwear that will equal our Men's in variety of patterns, exquisite styles, and surpassing wear.

Our position as leaders in the making and selling of boots and shoes was strongly emphasized last season by the fact that we sold more Men's Footwear in the various cities where we have opened our stores than was ever before done by the same number of stores.

The ultra style of our boots and shoes for women is distinctive. They are equal to the highest priced custom made—attractively different from the ready-made wear of other stores. In our factory we have been training a special corps of men for a long time for this work. These men, representing the highest skill to be found among union workmen, have produced a line of women's boots and shoes that in variety, style and wearing qualities, demand your inspection. Made in our own factory of "Hub Oak" soles, Goodyear flexible welts, and by union workers under the most perfect sanitary conditions, they are the perfection of shoe goodness. Our initial display is but a fore-runner of what you can expect at all times in this store. The character of our Boots and Shoes is guaranteed. We do not make idle claims, but

"We PROVE The Wear." Opening Days---TUESDAY, WEDNESDAY and THURSDAY

You are invited to call at any of our stores and inspect the various styles of Fine Footwear at your own leisure, whether you desire to purchase now or later. We shall maintain the same remarkable price in our Women's Department that we have established on our Men's and every pair of Boots or Shoes—equal to any $6 value, and better than many at that price—will be sold at the uniform price of $3.50 per pair.

ALL BOSTON BOOTS SHINED FREE AT OUR STORE.

BOSTON SHOE STORE, 106 Yonge Street, Toronto

Mail Orders 25 Cents Extra.

Factory—Boston, Mass., U.S.A.

NEW FISHING REGULATIONS.

Close Season for Black Bass and Maskinonge Extended.

As a result of a conference between S. T. Bastedo, deputy minister of fisheries, and the Dominion government, a number of new regulations governing fishing in Ontario and border waters will be formulated. A new regulation will immediately be put in force preventing any speckled trout caught in Ontario being taken outside the province. The sale of speckled trout will also be prohibited. The number of black bass that may be taken by one person has been reduced from twelve to eight, and the size increased from 10 inches to 12 inches. Whitefish and lake trout of less than 2-1/2 pounds cannot be taken. Yellow perch of 9 inches may be taken in the Great Lakes, and 7 inches elsewhere. The legal length of maskinonge has been made 30 inches, and nothing can be taken under this. No yellow pickerel under 15 inches, no blue pickerel under 10 inches, and no sturgeon under 36 inches.

The closed season for black bass and maskinonge will be from Jan. 1 to June 30. The close season for pickerel will be from Jan. 1 to May 13. Fishing in Lake Erie from Nov. 15 to March 15 will be stopped, providing the State of Ohio adopts a similar regulation.

Cane for Gamery.
R. R. Gamery, M.L.A., was presented with a gold-headed cane by admirers at a banquet Saturday night. The presentation was accompanied by an illuminated address, expressing appreciation of the recipient's public services.

AT THE THEATRES

Princess: "The Isle of Spice."
Grand: Herrmann the Great.
Majestic: "Uncle Tom's Cabin."
Shelburne: Vesta Tilley and vaudeville.
Star: World Beaters Burlesquers and J. J. Jeffries.

Delightful Sale.
It was quite a delightful change last night to pass from the wintry atmosphere outside into the warmth and brightness of "The Isle of Spice," presented at the Princess to a large, enthusiastic audience. There was a special reason for the unusual interest taken in this magnificent, gloom-dispelling musical extravaganza, to use the words of the program, which, in this instance, at least, are quite in accord with the truth. For with it came the debut of a well-known and charming Toronto girl on the stage of her own city. The welcome accorded her was particularly hearty, but no more than was justly due to an attractive and accomplished artist.

For the authors of the book and lyrics—Allen Lowe and George E. Sheddard—have gone to Nicolbar, an island in the Malay group. Its monarch, Bom-Popka, 6th king, is a very jolly and rollicking individual, very humorously portrayed by Harry Kelly. He has two wives, Kamorta and Trinket, but contemplates another matrimonial venture, as there is a convenient law in Nicolbar that where a queen reaches the age of 20 she must retire from the active duties of her position. So Bom-Popka, whose exchequer is in the immediate condition common to extravagant kings, has a double eye on his ward, Teresa, and her fortune.

To Nicolbar come Collins and Mackinaw, two deserters from the U. S. S. Roosevelt, who are believed to be envoys from the sun, and who greatly impress Bom-Popka, a sum running to millions in the original coinage of the Isle of Spice. Pursuit of the two sailor worthies brings to the Isle Lieut. Harold Kitchell, the hero of the Muldy Mack, who is at once smitten by the charms of Teresa, and finds his sentiments reciprocated. The story then gets slightly mixed, but in the process affords plenty of opportunity for an entertaining game of cards, in which the two bold sailor boys, now transmogrified into the lord high treasurer and high priest of Nicolbar, by a series of bare-faced tricks manage to clear his majesty of a goodly roll of bills. Soon after they get committed to the Tomb of Silence, where they have quite a good time. At last all is straightened out. The lieutenant generously leaves the king Teresa's dowry and declares himself romantically satisfied with the lady alone. The king turns to his dear Trinket and Collins is made happy with Asbena, the ex-dancer.

As for the rest, "The Isle of Spice" must be pronounced as lively and effective as any extravaganza as any that have been seen this season in Toronto. The stage settings are as varied as the kaleidoscope, the songs are tuneful and catchy and the choruses musical and well sung. The dancing is particularly good, and the production as a whole is a most enjoyable one.

Perhaps the song and chorus that made the greatest hit was "Peggy Brady" sung with much taste by Miss Leslie Leigh, as Trinket, who made a neat bit of a boy as any Irishman's heart could desire. It was encored again and yet again, and applause as loud when Miss Leigh was made the recipient of a lovely bouquet.

Another bouquet well deserved was the meed of Miss Fay Cameron, who, as Teresa, also greatly took the fancy of the audience.

Vesta Draws the Crowd.
Vesta Tilley drew record crowds to her show at both performances yesterday, and if the fact that she tricked half of her audience into the belief that she was a man is to be taken as a criterion she serves high rank as an impersonator. The hostess of the show is the best-dressed man in England, is not an idle one, for her costumes are the acme of perfection. The songs are English—very English—and good, and there is a certain frank boyishness about her in a half-feminine mood, which is a most enjoyable one.

After a series of tricks in pantomime, during which she satiated the thirst of the audience for a half-feminine mood, she then, in a series of songs, and a series of very clever impersonations, she drew the crowd to her show.

Mr. A. Daignault Was Tired of Life Because of Constant Illness

Mr. A. Daignault, St. Hyacinthe, P. Q., once so very near the grave, says: "I desire to say that, had it not been for Paine's Celery Compound I would not be living to-day. Five years ago I was taken sick, suffering from dyspepsia and catarrh. For three years I was unable to work, and would lose consciousness several times a day. I was tired of life, and could realize that death was my only deliverance from suffering. At that time one of my friends urged me to use Paine's Celery Compound as all other medicines had failed. After the use of six bottles I am as well as ever before in my life; my appetite is restored, and I can do a full day's work. My friends say my cure is a miracle, as I was surely condemned to die. I cannot thank you sufficiently for your wonderful life-giving medicine."

Paine's Celery Compound The Great Spring Medicine Saved Him.

If you are sick and desire free medical advice, write to "Consulting Physician," The Wells & Richardson Co., Limited, 200 Mountain-street, Montreal, P. Q.

Allen Lowe, Author of "Isle of Spice."

Allen Lowe and George E. Sheddard have gone to Nicolbar, an island in the Malay group. Its monarch, Bom-Popka, 6th king, is a very jolly and rollicking individual, very humorously portrayed by Harry Kelly. He has two wives, Kamorta and Trinket, but contemplates another matrimonial venture, as there is a convenient law in Nicolbar that where a queen reaches the age of 20 she must retire from the active duties of her position. So Bom-Popka, whose exchequer is in the immediate condition common to extravagant kings, has a double eye on his ward, Teresa, and her fortune.

To Nicolbar come Collins and Mackinaw, two deserters from the U. S. S. Roosevelt, who are believed to be envoys from the sun, and who greatly impress Bom-Popka, a sum running to millions in the original coinage of the Isle of Spice. Pursuit of the two sailor worthies brings to the Isle Lieut. Harold Kitchell, the hero of the Muldy Mack, who is at once smitten by the charms of Teresa, and finds his sentiments reciprocated. The story then gets slightly mixed, but in the process affords plenty of opportunity for an entertaining game of cards, in which the two bold sailor boys, now transmogrified into the lord high treasurer and high priest of Nicolbar, by a series of bare-faced tricks manage to clear his majesty of a goodly roll of bills. Soon after they get committed to the Tomb of Silence, where they have quite a good time. At last all is straightened out. The lieutenant generously leaves the king Teresa's dowry and declares himself romantically satisfied with the lady alone. The king turns to his dear Trinket and Collins is made happy with Asbena, the ex-dancer.

As for the rest, "The Isle of Spice" must be pronounced as lively and effective as any extravaganza as any that have been seen this season in Toronto. The stage settings are as varied as the kaleidoscope, the songs are tuneful and catchy and the choruses musical and well sung. The dancing is particularly good, and the production as a whole is a most enjoyable one.

Perhaps the song and chorus that made the greatest hit was "Peggy Brady" sung with much taste by Miss Leslie Leigh, as Trinket, who made a neat bit of a boy as any Irishman's heart could desire. It was encored again and yet again, and applause as loud when Miss Leigh was made the recipient of a lovely bouquet.

Another bouquet well deserved was the meed of Miss Fay Cameron, who, as Teresa, also greatly took the fancy of the audience.

Vesta Draws the Crowd.
Vesta Tilley drew record crowds to her show at both performances yesterday, and if the fact that she tricked half of her audience into the belief that she was a man is to be taken as a criterion she serves high rank as an impersonator. The hostess of the show is the best-dressed man in England, is not an idle one, for her costumes are the acme of perfection. The songs are English—very English—and good, and there is a certain frank boyishness about her in a half-feminine mood, which is a most enjoyable one.

After a series of tricks in pantomime, during which she satiated the thirst of the audience for a half-feminine mood, she then, in a series of songs, and a series of very clever impersonations, she drew the crowd to her show.

Mr. A. Daignault Was Tired of Life Because of Constant Illness

Mr. A. Daignault, St. Hyacinthe, P. Q., once so very near the grave, says: "I desire to say that, had it not been for Paine's Celery Compound I would not be living to-day. Five years ago I was taken sick, suffering from dyspepsia and catarrh. For three years I was unable to work, and would lose consciousness several times a day. I was tired of life, and could realize that death was my only deliverance from suffering. At that time one of my friends urged me to use Paine's Celery Compound as all other medicines had failed. After the use of six bottles I am as well as ever before in my life; my appetite is restored, and I can do a full day's work. My friends say my cure is a miracle, as I was surely condemned to die. I cannot thank you sufficiently for your wonderful life-giving medicine."

Paine's Celery Compound The Great Spring Medicine Saved Him.

If you are sick and desire free medical advice, write to "Consulting Physician," The Wells & Richardson Co., Limited, 200 Mountain-street, Montreal, P. Q.

Allen Lowe, Author of "Isle of Spice."

Allen Lowe and George E. Sheddard have gone to Nicolbar, an island in the Malay group. Its monarch, Bom-Popka, 6th king, is a very jolly and rollicking individual, very humorously portrayed by Harry Kelly. He has two wives, Kamorta and Trinket, but contemplates another matrimonial venture, as there is a convenient law in Nicolbar that where a queen reaches the age of 20 she must retire from the active duties of her position. So Bom-Popka, whose exchequer is in the immediate condition common to extravagant kings, has a double eye on his ward, Teresa, and her fortune.

To Nicolbar come Collins and Mackinaw, two deserters from the U. S. S. Roosevelt, who are believed to be envoys from the sun, and who greatly impress Bom-Popka, a sum running to millions in the original coinage of the Isle of Spice. Pursuit of the two sailor worthies brings to the Isle Lieut. Harold Kitchell, the hero of the Muldy Mack, who is at once smitten by the charms of Teresa, and finds his sentiments reciprocated. The story then gets slightly mixed, but in the process affords plenty of opportunity for an entertaining game of cards, in which the two bold sailor boys, now transmogrified into the lord high treasurer and high priest of Nicolbar, by a series of bare-faced tricks manage to clear his majesty of a goodly roll of bills. Soon after they get committed to the Tomb of Silence, where they have quite a good time. At last all is straightened out. The lieutenant generously leaves the king Teresa's dowry and declares himself romantically satisfied with the lady alone. The king turns to his dear Trinket and Collins is made happy with Asbena, the ex-dancer.

As for the rest, "The Isle of Spice" must be pronounced as lively and effective as any extravaganza as any that have been seen this season in Toronto. The stage settings are as varied as the kaleidoscope, the songs are tuneful and catchy and the choruses musical and well sung. The dancing is particularly good, and the production as a whole is a most enjoyable one.

Perhaps the song and chorus that made the greatest hit was "Peggy Brady" sung with much taste by Miss Leslie Leigh, as Trinket, who made a neat bit of a boy as any Irishman's heart could desire. It was encored again and yet again, and applause as loud when Miss Leigh was made the recipient of a lovely bouquet.

Another bouquet well deserved was the meed of Miss Fay Cameron, who, as Teresa, also greatly took the fancy of the audience.

Vesta Draws the Crowd.
Vesta Tilley drew record crowds to her show at both performances yesterday, and if the fact that she tricked half of her audience into the belief that she was a man is to be taken as a criterion she serves high rank as an impersonator. The hostess of the show is the best-dressed man in England, is not an idle one, for her costumes are the acme of perfection. The songs are English—very English—and good, and there is a certain frank boyishness about her in a half-feminine mood, which is a most enjoyable one.

After a series of tricks in pantomime, during which she satiated the thirst of the audience for a half-feminine mood, she then, in a series of songs, and a series of very clever impersonations, she drew the crowd to her show.

Mr. A. Daignault Was Tired of Life Because of Constant Illness

Mr. A. Daignault, St. Hyacinthe, P. Q., once so very near the grave, says: "I desire to say that, had it not been for Paine's Celery Compound I would not be living to-day. Five years ago I was taken sick, suffering from dyspepsia and catarrh. For three years I was unable to work, and would lose consciousness several times a day. I was tired of life, and could realize that death was my only deliverance from suffering. At that time one of my friends urged me to use Paine's Celery Compound as all other medicines had failed. After the use of six bottles I am as well as ever before in my life; my appetite is restored, and I can do a full day's work. My friends say my cure is a miracle, as I was surely condemned to die. I cannot thank you sufficiently for your wonderful life-giving medicine."

Paine's Celery Compound The Great Spring Medicine Saved Him.

If you are sick and desire free medical advice, write to "Consulting Physician," The Wells & Richardson Co., Limited, 200 Mountain-street, Montreal, P. Q.

Allen Lowe, Author of "Isle of Spice."

Allen Lowe and George E. Sheddard have gone to Nicolbar, an island in the Malay group. Its monarch, Bom-Popka, 6th king, is a very jolly and rollicking individual, very humorously portrayed by Harry Kelly. He has two wives, Kamorta and Trinket, but contemplates another matrimonial venture, as there is a convenient law in Nicolbar that where a queen reaches the age of 20 she must retire from the active duties of her position. So Bom-Popka, whose exchequer is in the immediate condition common to extravagant kings, has a double eye on his ward, Teresa, and her fortune.

To Nicolbar come Collins and Mackinaw, two deserters from the U. S. S. Roosevelt, who are believed to be envoys from the sun, and who greatly impress Bom-Popka, a sum running to millions in the original coinage of the Isle of Spice. Pursuit of the two sailor worthies brings to the Isle Lieut. Harold Kitchell, the hero of the Muldy Mack, who is at once smitten by the charms of Teresa, and finds his sentiments reciprocated. The story then gets slightly mixed, but in the process affords plenty of opportunity for an entertaining game of cards, in which the two bold sailor boys, now transmogrified into the lord high treasurer and high priest of Nicolbar, by a series of bare-faced tricks manage to clear his majesty of a goodly roll of bills. Soon after they get committed to the Tomb of Silence, where they have quite a good time. At last all is straightened out. The lieutenant generously leaves the king Teresa's dowry and declares himself romantically satisfied with the lady alone. The king turns to his dear Trinket and Collins is made happy with Asbena, the ex-dancer.

As for the rest, "The Isle of Spice" must be pronounced as lively and effective as any extravaganza as any that have been seen this season in Toronto. The stage settings are as varied as the kaleidoscope, the songs are tuneful and catchy and the choruses musical and well sung. The dancing is particularly good, and the production as a whole is a most enjoyable one.

Perhaps the song and chorus that made the greatest hit was "Peggy Brady" sung with much taste by Miss Leslie Leigh, as Trinket, who made a neat bit of a boy as any Irishman's heart could desire. It was encored again and yet again, and applause as loud when Miss Leigh was made the recipient of a lovely bouquet.

Another bouquet well deserved was the meed of Miss Fay Cameron, who, as Teresa, also greatly took the fancy of the audience.

Vesta Draws the Crowd.
Vesta Tilley drew record crowds to her show at both performances yesterday, and if the fact that she tricked half of her audience into the belief that she was a man is to be taken as a criterion she serves high rank as an impersonator. The hostess of the show is the best-dressed man in England, is not an idle one, for her costumes are the acme of perfection. The songs are English—very English—and good, and there is a certain frank boyishness about her in a half-feminine mood, which is a most enjoyable one.

After a series of tricks in pantomime, during which she satiated the thirst of the audience for a half-feminine mood, she then, in a series of songs, and a series of very clever impersonations, she drew the crowd to her show.

Mr. A. Daignault Was Tired of Life Because of Constant Illness

Mr. A. Daignault, St. Hyacinthe, P. Q., once so very near the grave, says: "I desire to say that, had it not been for Paine's Celery Compound I would not be living to-day. Five years ago I was taken sick, suffering from dyspepsia and catarrh. For three years I was unable to work, and would lose consciousness several times a day. I was tired of life, and could realize that death was my only deliverance from suffering. At that time one of my friends urged me to use Paine's Celery Compound as all other medicines had failed. After the use of six bottles I am as well as ever before in my life; my appetite is restored, and I can do a full day's work. My friends say my cure is a miracle, as I was surely condemned to die. I cannot thank you sufficiently for your wonderful life-giving medicine."

Paine's Celery Compound The Great Spring Medicine Saved Him.

If you are sick and desire free medical advice, write to "Consulting Physician," The Wells & Richardson Co., Limited, 200 Mountain-street, Montreal, P. Q.

Allen Lowe, Author of "Isle of Spice."

Allen Lowe and George E. Sheddard have gone to Nicolbar, an island in the Malay group. Its monarch, Bom-Popka, 6th king, is a very jolly and rollicking individual, very humorously portrayed by Harry Kelly. He has two wives, Kamorta and Trinket, but contemplates another matrimonial venture, as there is a convenient law in Nicolbar that where a queen reaches the age of 20 she must retire from the active duties of her position. So Bom-Popka, whose exchequer is in the immediate condition common to extravagant kings, has a double eye on his ward, Teresa, and her fortune.

To Nicolbar come Collins and Mackinaw, two deserters from the U. S. S. Roosevelt, who are believed to be envoys from the sun, and who greatly impress Bom-Popka, a sum running to millions in the original coinage of the Isle of Spice. Pursuit of the two sailor worthies brings to the Isle Lieut. Harold Kitchell, the hero of the Muldy Mack, who is at once smitten by the charms of Teresa, and finds his sentiments reciprocated. The story then gets slightly mixed, but in the process affords plenty of opportunity for an entertaining game of cards, in which the two bold sailor boys, now transmogrified into the lord high treasurer and high priest of Nicolbar, by a series of bare-faced tricks manage to clear his majesty of a goodly roll of bills. Soon after they get committed to the Tomb of Silence, where they have quite a good time. At last all is straightened out. The lieutenant generously leaves the king Teresa's dowry and declares himself romantically satisfied with the lady alone. The king turns to his dear Trinket and Collins is made happy with Asbena, the ex-dancer.

As for the rest, "The Isle of Spice" must be pronounced as lively and effective as any extravaganza as any that have been seen this season in Toronto. The stage settings are as varied as the kaleidoscope, the songs are tuneful and catchy and the choruses musical and well sung. The dancing is particularly good, and the production as a whole is a most enjoyable one.

Perhaps the song and chorus that made the greatest hit was "Peggy Brady" sung with much taste by Miss Leslie Leigh, as Trinket, who made a neat bit of a boy as any Irishman's heart could desire. It was encored again and yet again, and applause as loud when Miss Leigh was made the recipient of a lovely bouquet.

Another bouquet well deserved was the meed of Miss Fay Cameron, who, as Teresa, also greatly took the fancy of the audience.

Vesta Draws the Crowd.
Vesta Tilley drew record crowds to her show at both performances yesterday, and if the fact that she tricked half of her audience into the belief that she was a man is to be taken as a criterion she serves high rank as an impersonator. The hostess of the show is the best-dressed man in England, is not an idle one, for her costumes are the acme of perfection. The songs are English—very English—and good, and there is a certain frank boyishness about her in a half-feminine mood, which is a most enjoyable one.

After a series of tricks in pantomime, during which she satiated the thirst of the audience for a half-feminine mood, she then, in a series of songs, and a series of very clever impersonations, she drew the crowd to her show.

Mr. A. Daignault Was Tired of Life Because of Constant Illness

Mr. A. Daignault, St. Hyacinthe, P. Q., once so very near the grave, says: "I desire to say that, had it not been for Paine's Celery Compound I would not be living to-day. Five years ago I was taken sick, suffering from dyspepsia and catarrh. For three years I was unable to work, and would lose consciousness several times a day. I was tired of life, and could realize that death was my only deliverance from suffering. At that time one of my friends urged me to use Paine's Celery Compound as all other medicines had failed. After the use of six bottles I am as well as ever before in my life; my appetite is restored, and I can do a full day's work. My friends say my cure is a miracle, as I was surely condemned to die. I cannot thank you sufficiently for your wonderful life-giving medicine."

Paine's Celery Compound The Great Spring Medicine Saved Him.

If you are sick and desire free medical advice, write to "Consulting Physician," The Wells & Richardson Co., Limited, 200 Mountain-street, Montreal, P. Q.

Allen Lowe, Author of "Isle of Spice."

Allen Lowe and George E. Sheddard have gone to Nicolbar, an island in the Malay group. Its monarch, Bom-Popka, 6th king, is a very jolly and rollicking individual, very humorously portrayed by Harry Kelly. He has two wives, Kamorta and Trinket, but contemplates another matrimonial venture, as there is a convenient law in Nicolbar that where a queen reaches the age of 20 she must retire from the active duties of her position. So Bom-Popka, whose exchequer is in the immediate condition common to extravagant kings, has a double eye on his ward, Teresa, and her fortune.

To Nicolbar come Collins and Mackinaw, two deserters from the U. S. S. Roosevelt, who are believed to be envoys from the sun, and who greatly impress Bom-Popka, a sum running to millions in the original coinage of the Isle of Spice. Pursuit of the two sailor worthies brings to the Isle Lieut. Harold Kitchell, the hero of the Muldy Mack, who is at once smitten by the charms of Teresa, and finds his sentiments reciprocated. The story then gets slightly mixed, but in the process affords plenty of opportunity for an entertaining game of cards, in which the two bold sailor boys, now transmogrified into the lord high treasurer and high priest of Nicolbar, by a series of bare-faced tricks manage to clear his majesty of a goodly roll of bills. Soon after they get committed to the Tomb of Silence, where they have quite a good time. At last all is straightened out. The lieutenant generously leaves the king Teresa's dowry and declares himself romantically satisfied with the lady alone. The king turns to his dear Trinket and Collins is made happy with Asbena, the ex-dancer.

As for the rest, "The Isle of Spice" must be pronounced as lively and effective as any extravaganza as any that have been seen this season in Toronto. The stage settings are as varied as the kaleidoscope, the songs are tuneful and catchy and the choruses musical and well sung. The dancing is particularly good, and the production as a whole is a most enjoyable one.

Perhaps the song and chorus that made the greatest hit was "Peggy Brady" sung with much taste by Miss Leslie Leigh, as Trinket, who made a neat bit of a boy as any Irishman's heart could desire. It was encored again and yet again, and applause as loud when Miss Leigh was made the recipient of a lovely bouquet.

Another bouquet well deserved was the meed of Miss Fay Cameron, who, as Teresa, also greatly took the fancy of the audience.

Vesta Draws the Crowd.
Vesta Tilley drew record crowds to her show at both performances yesterday, and if the fact that she tricked half of her audience into the belief that she was a man is to be taken as a criterion she serves high rank as an impersonator. The hostess of the show is the best-dressed man in England, is not an idle one, for her costumes are the acme of perfection. The songs are English—very English—and good, and there is a certain frank boyishness about her in a half-feminine mood, which is a most enjoyable one.

After a series of tricks in pantomime, during which she satiated the thirst of the audience for a half-feminine mood, she then, in a series of songs, and a series of very clever impersonations, she drew the crowd to her show.

Mr. A. Daignault Was Tired of Life Because of Constant Illness

Mr. A. Daignault, St. Hyacinthe, P. Q., once so very near the grave, says: "I desire to say that, had it not been for Paine's Celery Compound I would not be living to-day. Five years ago I was taken sick, suffering from dyspepsia and catarrh. For three years I was unable to work, and would lose consciousness several times a day. I was tired of life, and could realize that death was my only deliverance from suffering. At that time one of my friends urged me to use Paine's Celery Compound as all other medicines had failed. After the use of six bottles I am as well as ever before in my life; my appetite is restored, and I can do a full day's work. My friends say my cure is a miracle, as I was surely condemned to die. I cannot thank you sufficiently for your wonderful life-giving medicine."

Paine's Celery Compound The Great Spring Medicine Saved Him.

If you are sick and desire free medical advice, write to "Consulting Physician," The Wells & Richardson Co., Limited, 200 Mountain-street, Montreal, P. Q.

Allen Lowe, Author of "Isle of Spice."

Allen Lowe and George E. Sheddard have gone to Nicolbar, an island in the Malay group. Its monarch, Bom-Popka, 6th king, is a very jolly and rollicking individual, very humorously portrayed by Harry Kelly. He has two wives, Kamorta and Trinket, but contemplates another matrimonial venture, as there is a convenient law in Nicolbar that where a queen reaches the age of 20 she must retire from the active duties of her position. So Bom-Popka, whose exchequer is in the immediate condition common to extravagant kings, has a double eye on his ward, Teresa, and her fortune.

To Nicolbar come Collins and Mackinaw, two deserters from the U. S. S. Roosevelt, who are believed to be envoys from the sun, and who greatly impress Bom-Popka, a sum running to millions in the original coinage of the Isle of Spice. Pursuit of the two sailor worthies brings to the Isle Lieut. Harold Kitchell, the hero of the Muldy Mack, who is at once smitten by the charms of Teresa, and finds his sentiments reciprocated. The story then gets slightly mixed, but in the process affords plenty of opportunity for an entertaining game of cards, in which the two bold sailor boys, now transmogrified into the lord high treasurer and high priest of Nicolbar, by a series of bare-faced tricks manage to clear his majesty of a goodly roll of bills. Soon after they get committed to the Tomb of Silence, where they have quite a good time. At last all is straightened out. The lieutenant generously leaves the king Teresa's dowry and declares himself romantically satisfied with the lady alone. The king turns to his dear Trinket and Collins is made happy with Asbena, the ex-dancer.

As for the rest, "The Isle of Spice" must be pronounced as lively and effective as any extravaganza as any that have been seen this season in Toronto. The stage settings are as varied as the kaleidoscope, the songs are tuneful and catchy and the choruses musical and well sung. The dancing is particularly good, and the production as a whole is a most enjoyable one.

Perhaps the song and chorus that made the greatest hit was "Peggy Brady" sung with much taste by Miss Leslie Leigh, as Trinket, who made a neat bit of a boy as any Irishman's heart could desire. It was encored again and yet again, and applause as loud when Miss Leigh was made the recipient of a lovely bouquet.

Another bouquet well deserved was the meed of Miss Fay Cameron, who, as Teresa, also greatly took the fancy of the audience.

Vesta Draws the Crowd.
Vesta Tilley drew record crowds to her show at both performances yesterday, and if the fact that she tricked half of her audience into the belief that she was a man is to be taken as a criterion she serves high rank as an impersonator. The hostess of the show is the best-dressed man in England, is not an idle one, for her costumes are the acme of perfection. The songs are English—very English—and good, and there is a certain frank boyishness about her in a half-feminine mood, which is a most enjoyable one.

After a series of tricks in pantomime, during which she satiated the thirst of the audience for a half-feminine mood, she then, in a series of songs, and a series of very clever impersonations, she drew the crowd to her show.

Mr. A. Daignault Was Tired of Life Because of Constant Illness