LEG CUT OFF IN EXPLOSION.

Mechanic Was Trying to Thaw Out Compressed Air Tank.

Paterson, N. J., Jan. 6.—James Simpson, forty-one years, a mechanic for the New Jersey Public Service Corporation, was injured, probably fatally, by the explosion of a compressed air container he was trying to thaw out with a torch in the rear of the corporation at the Broadway Terminal in this city. The force of explosion was felt for several blocks. Simpson's left leg was severed by a fragment of the tank. A piece of the tank was hurled across the street and through a brick wall two feet thick. Surgeons at St. Joseph's Hospital said that Simpson had only a slight chance to recover.
