A POIT PREACHER—Rev. Mathew Richery Knight will occupy the pulpit of Queen square church next Sunday morning and that of Exmouth street church in the evening. Mr. Knight belongs to no mutual admiration society and consequently his name seldom appears in print, but those who have read his "peems of Ten Years," a volume puolished in 1887, recognize in him one of the first, if not the first of Canada's writers of verse. The volume was quoted from on its appearance, but a repetition of the first of Canada's writers of verse. The volume was quoted from on its appearance but a repetition of the follows:

AT BOCABEC.—One day last week a thistle bird flew into the house of Mr. Merchant at Bocabec and alighted upon the hand of his wife and ate crumbs therefrom. But the most remarkable part of the story is that the bird had a small piece of paper attached to its leg by a thread. Upon the scrap of paper was written the figures '121.' The people are not superstitious, but they think it is an ill omen and fear it portends the untimely death of Mrs. Merchant, at the tender age of 121 years.
