It is well to leave the teaching of mathematics to mathematicians and the explanation of Chris- ing. tian Science to the loyal and success-

The statement of Christian Science "All is mind and there is no matter," s based upon the understanding that book, Science and Health with Key to "God is Spirit, Mind," as the Scripbook, Science and Health with Key to the Scriptures, by Rev. Mary Baker G. Eddy, it is admitted to be consistent. It takes for its premises the Scriptural teaching, "God is Spirit; God is Love; Spirit is Truth." "It is the Spirit that quickeneth; the flesh profiteth nothing," and thus far no critic has ever attempted to prove that any part of the book is inconsistent with its premise.

"God is Spirit, Mind," as the Scriptural tures teach, and that His creation is His likeness or reflection and, therefore, spiritual. It admits that everything is creation, from the least to the greatest, is real, and it does not teach that man has no body, but that creative divings—the body included—are not what they seem to that material quality of understanding which is not able to perceive them from the God-view

Mrs. Eddy points to the fact that when John's disciples inquired gues; they shall take up serpents; and if they drink any deadly thing, it shall not hurt them; they shall take up serpents; and if they drink any deadly thing, it shall not hurt them; they shall lay hands on the siah, he did not answer by saying, "I amption that Christian Science is a more belief, for it is indeed a science and must be so treated; therefore, to give it "due consideration" one should make sure of his understanding by his ability to demonstrate it. In the Christian Science church one is not person in a mere humanly circumscribe sense, yet Mrs. Eddy declares: term personality, as applied to God, means infinite personality, then God is not in the lower sense."

Christian Science not only accords with the accounts of creation given in the first and second chapters of Genesis, but gives a rational explanation thereof. Christian Science teaches that man was made in the image and like ness of God, and endorses the Scrip tural teaching, "And God saw every thing that he had made, and, behold, was very good."

Christian Scientists believe in the mmaculate Conception, in the cruci fixion, the resurrection and ascension of Jesus. They also belive in the se cond coming of Christ and the Judg ment, though they may differ from our friend in their understanding . the nature and purpose of these. While Christian Science does not endorse the egendary and traditional belief in personal devil with horns and hoofs it recognizes that mortals sometimes nake personal devils of themselves by mproper conduct. They believe that hell is the material, discordant condi ion, while Heaven is the harmonious stiritual state: that Heaven is no eached by making a journey from one ecation to another, but from one cor dition to another-from a material to

It is possible that this science may differ from our critic's particular interpretation of the Scriptures, but we insist that it is in strict accord with this glorious."
